LEAGUE GROUP TODAY STUDIES LYTTON QUIZ; REPORT HIT BY TOKYO

Nippon's Claim of Self-Defense Renewed.

STUDY SEEN INACCURATE

Violation of Treaty in Manchurian Action Again Denied.

Geneva, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—League of Nations quarters were almost unanimous tonight in the belief that Japan's position was unchanged in any appreciable degree by her reply to the Lytton Commission report on Manchuria which was published here today.

Flat contradiction of the principal findings of the Lytton report regarding the Japanese responsibility in events in Manchuria during the past fourteen months, is contained in the Japanese observations on the report.

The council of the League of Nations will begin discussion of the Lytton report tomorrow. The Japanese document was brought here by Yosuko Matsuoka from Tokyo and was submitted to the council by Haruichi Nagaoka, Japanese representative here. President de Valera of the Irish Free State, who will preside over the council, conferred with representatives of the great powers today on matters of procedure. It is expected the council will take the Lytton report immediately, instead of deferring it in favor of minor business.

New Chinese Attack.

Simultaneous with publication of Japanese comments, the Chinese delegation loosed a spirited blast against the Japanese military policy and coupled it with assurances of support for League of Nations efforts toward specific settlement of the Manchurian problem.

The Japanese document, whose serious perusal requires a good two hours' concentration, reached delegates to the council of the league too late today for detailed reactions. The American disarmament delegation, which is awaiting events with keen interest, declined to comment on the ground that the Japanese reply is purely a league matter.

Other Americans here, however, said they felt the United States could not commit itself to findings of fact at which the council of the league may arrive.

Lord Lytton, who was chairman of the investigation commission in Manchuria, said he intended to "speak later in his own name," unimpeded. Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy, American representative on the Lytton commission; Count Luigi Aldrovandi, Italian member, and Dr. Heinrich Schnee, German member, met tonight informally. They will attend tomorrow's session of the council.

The Japanese observations declare that the Mukden attack, which was

CHINESE CRITICIZE JAPAN'S ATTITUDE

(Associated Press.)

The Chinese government in a statement last night through its legation here said the Japanese "observations" on the Lytton report must be regarded "as a one-sided version of the Japanese story."

The points of the Chinese statement continued, "when the league commission of inquiry was proceeding with its investigations in Manchuria, the Japanese had already submitted such statements to the commission. The findings and conclusions reached by the commission as embodied in the report were, however, diametrically opposed to those advanced by the Japanese.

"These findings and conclusions arrived at as a result of investigations on the spot by the commission indicate unmistakably that the Japanese version of the case was nothing more than a piece of apologetics and propaganda. It was, therefore, discaffied completely by the commission.

"Having been thus rejected by the commission, the Japanese now undertook to publish on their account the so-called 'observations.'

"That such literature is void of a grain of value is evident. The Chinese government and people will not consider them with any degree of seriousness. The Chinese government will decide, however, whether to make a rebuttal when the text of the whole 'observations' is available."

Ships Slightly Damaged In Collision During Fog

Flushing, Holland, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The steamer Antwerp, bound for Harwich, England, with passengers, was struck on the port bow in a collision today with the American steamer Hastings, out of Antwerp for Mobile. The accident occurred in a fog shortly after both vessels left here.

The Antwerp was reported returning here to land passengers, but it was learned later she did not put back. Her damage was above the shelter deck and when it was learned she was not taking on water she proceeded to Harwich. The Hastings lost an anchor but continued her voyage.

Five Hurt, Admiral Held in Auto Crash

Second Driver Also Faces Charge of Recklessness After Accident.

Five persons were injured when the machine in which they were riding overturned three times, and two men, one a rear admiral in the Navy, were charged with reckless driving last night, following an automobile accident on the East-West Highway near Bethesda, Md.

Both drivers, Rear Admiral Lloyd Chandler, U. S. N., of 3024 Tilden street northwest, and William P. Wright, 44 years old, of 1807 Kenyon street northwest, claimed their car was struck by the other, police reported. Admiral Chandler and his wife escaped injury, although their machine was badly damaged.

Members of Wright's party were taken to Walter Reed Hospital. In addition to Wright they included his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Wright, and their daughter, Nancy Lee; Joseph R. Walt, 23 years old and his wife, Mrs. Doris Walt, 18 years old, of 1815 Kenyon street northwest. Admiral Chandler and Wright were charged with reckless driving on warrants issued by Justice of the Peace Donald Canada, of Bethesda. They were released under a bond of $200 each to appear in Rockville police court on December 8.

Counter-Attack on Japan Made by Chinese.

AMERICANS ARE SILENT

U. S. Is Not Due to Be Bound by Action at Sessions.

(Associated Press.)

A plea of self defense and a denial of treaty violation in her action in Manchuria are coupled in Japan's answer to the indictments of the Lytton commission, which she will make to the council of the League of Nations at Geneva today.

The report of the Lytton commission, which investigated the Manchurian situation, placed responsibility for the outbreak on the Japanese military element.

In a summary of the Tokyo government's observations, as they will be outlined before the league, released here yesterday by the Japanese Embassy, the Japanese contend:

Japanese Contentions.

That the activities of the army were made necessary by the hostile action of the Chinese in various parts of Manchuria, which, like China proper, long has suffered from a lack of proper organized government.

That the preliminary steps taken by Japanese soldiers in Manchuria were designed only to protect its own nationals and properties under Japanese control by treaty rights.

That neither the Kellog antiwar pact nor the nine-power treaty protecting the sovereign rights of China have been violated.

The Japanese summary at the outset presents the viewpoint that the Lytton report distinctly favors the Chinese in numerous instances, to the disadvantage of the Japanese, and contends that the document is filled with inaccuracies and misrepresentations.

Report Evidence Cited.

"It is apparent on the face of the (Lytton) report that its findings are based on newspaper articles, letters of casual correspondents and private conversations, as well as authenticated official material, and right of elucidating the degree of credit which attaches to this miscellaneous evidence must be reserved," says the Tokyo summary.

The evidence all through the report, the Japanese assert, "is invariably against Japan * * * and leads to a complete misconstruction of the motives which actuated the Japanese armed forces" in the Mukden out-

2 Invade Hotel Lobby; Get $15,000 in Gems

Kansas City, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Two men late today menaced ten persons in the lobby of the Westgate Hotel with revolvers, picked up a jewelry salesman's sample case and its $15,000 contents and escaped in a motor car.

The sample case had been left at the hotel desk by Samuel B. Schwartz, of New York. He said he believed the jewelry was insured. The case had not been put into the hotel safe because it was too large.

"CARPETBAG" FOE

GOV. LAWRENCE M. JUDD.

HAWAII HOME RULE DEFENDED BY JUDD

(Associated Press.)

Finding an "amazing absence of any crime problem of major proportions" in Hawaii, Lawrence M. Judd, governor of the Territory, reported to Secretary Wilbur yesterday that recent legislation should make Honolulu an "exemplary community."

In his annual report, Judd also protested against permitting what he described as "carpetbaggers" to govern the islands. He said legislation is before Congress to deprive the Territory of part of its self-government.

Referring to the Massie case, the governor said Hawaii "has been made the victim of an unfortunate occurrence last September, despite the admitted fact that said occurrence was practically an isolated case of its kind in our midst, in no wise reflecting the peaceful and law-abiding nature and conduct of our citizens."

This was an attack on Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of a Navy lieutenant, which precipitated the slaying of one of the men alleged to have assaulted her.

The legislation before Congress would give Hawaii commission form of government instead of a legislature. Under present law, all the officials, including the governor, must be citizens of Hawaii.

"The carpetbagger," Judd said, "designates the product of a system proved by the experience of years in American government to be vicious.

"It is generally synonymous with the appointment to office in distant parts of the country of men who lack knowledge of the place before arriving; who have little understanding of the people and the problems of the community; who are not responsive

Rhine Area Rocked By Earth Shocks

Severe Tremors Are Felt in Many Cities, But Damage Is Slight.

Dusseldorf, Germany (Monday), Nov. 21 (A.P.).—An earthquake shaking the entire Ruhr Valley and lower Rhine region of Germany and Holland awoke inhabitants at 12:40 a. m. today. Window panes were broken and furniture was shifted in many homes.

It was reported that the shocks lasted three seconds. They were particularly severe in Gladbach-Rheydt, Nymegen (across the border in Holland) and Krefeld. The quake was also felt in the cities of Cologne and Coblenz.

Telephone exchanges, fire departments and police were swamped by calls of frightened inhabitants. The shock upset a lamp at Gladbach-Rheydt, starting a fire. So far as could be ascertained early today, other damage was slight.

HOOVER IS BUSY ON DEBT STUDY; READY FOR TALK

Prepares for Exchange of Views Tomorrow With Roosevelt.

ANSWER TO BRITISH WAITS ON MEETING

Congress Leaders Arriving for Wednesday Parley; Garner Expected.

(Associated Press.)

In the face of steadily growing congressional opposition to war debt revision, suspension or cancellation, President Hoover yesterday marshalled, but kept silent upon, his answer to that thorny problem.

Shifting concentration temporarily from his drive for reduced expenditures—now feeling he can slash $550,000,000 from appropriations—the President prepared for his exchange of war debt proposals with President-elect Roosevelt tomorrow. Pending this interchange, Mr. Hoover has declared himself "loath to proceed with recommendations to the Congress."

Garner to Attend Wednesday.

It was said at the White House last night that Speaker Garner, Vice President-elect, has been invited to attend the conference Mr. Hoover will have with members of Congress Wednesday on debts. Under present plans, though, he will be at tomorrow's talks.

Mr. Hoover yesterday spent much of his time in the White House study, and in talk with a few of his friends and advisers concerning both the domestic and international situation.

The Chief Executive is counting upon Mr. Roosevelt's influence with Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill, should they be able to reach common ground, both in his answer to foreign debtors' requests for a suspension of December 15 payments and for a reopening of debt negotiations.

Reply to Be Delayed.

Also the more immediate reply to Great Britain's note suggesting such action almost certainly will be delayed until the meeting of the President and the President-elect. Similar proposals, in the form of memoranda from France and Belgium, will not require an immediate answer.

Meanwhile, as more and more Senate and House leaders converged upon the Capital, there came iterated statements against any moratorium

Train at Chester Kills Three Boys

Chester, Pa., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Three small boys were killed by a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train on an elevated crossing in the center of Chester today.

The boys, identified several hours after the accident, were James Hamilton, 11; George Davis, jr., 12, and his brother, Westley, 9.

Police expressed the opinion the children had been playing along the tracks. The engineer of the train, bound from Washington to New York, was unaware of the accident until it stopped in Philadelphia, where railroad police informed him. One of the bodies was thrown from the elevated tracks to the feet of two pedestrians who were about to pass beneath the crossing.

Youthful Terrorist Confesses 3 Slayings

Chicago, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—A youthful terroist, James (Iggy) Varecha, confessed today, police said, to an orgy of crime that embraced at least three wanton slayings, a dozen robberies, several attacks upon women and seven unprovoked shootings.

Varecha, a former inmate of a Dixon (Ill.) institute for mental defectives, was arrested yesterday for the slaying of Frank Jordan and an attack upon Miss Lillian Henry, 20, niece of Deputy Police Commissioner John Alcock. He admitted those crimes, according to authorities, and told, in addition, of killing an old man and a Mexican during robberies

'MODEL BOY' IS SAID TO CONFESS MURDER

Mount Carroll, Ill., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—A 16-year-old Chicago youth, regarded by his family as a "model boy," was held here tonight after State's Attorney Ralph Eaton said he confessed the slaying of his 60-year-old step-grandmother, Mrs. Ellen Saxe.

The boy, Charles Bertrand (Bert) Arnold, was arrested in nearby Stockton about 7 p. m. at the height of an intensified search over the Midwest for him.

Eaton said young Arnold readily admitted his identity and confessed the killing. He was lodged in the Carroll County Jail pending arrival of Cook County officers. Eaton refused to make public the confession or the motive for the slaying, stating he was holding that for Assistant State's Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne, of Chicago.

Mrs. Saxe, her head crushed by a blow, was found dead in a cistern at the rear of the Arnold home in Riverside, a Chicago suburb, last Saturday morning. A trail of blood led from the living room of the house to the cistern.

Young Arnold was missing. When he failed to return from a church dance that night, his father, C. B. Arnold, Chicago manufacturer, asked that a search be started for him on the theory that the youth was abducted by Mrs. Saxe's slayers.

Police, however, regarded him as a "key witness" when they discovered he had been seen leaving the Arnold home about 11:20 p. m. shortly after the time they fixed for the killing.

The arrest followed the finding of Mrs. Saxe's abandoned automobile near here this afternoon. When last

RAILS ARE BOMBED IN PLOT ON HERRIOT

Breton Autonomists Blamed for Blast in Path of Premier's Train.

Nantes, France, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Edouard Herriot, genial and popular premier of France, narrowly escaped assassination today when two bombs destroyed a section of railway track over which his train was due to pass en route to Nantes.

The bombing was attributed to Breton autonomists, long bitter against France because of the annexation of their province 400 years ago. Herriot's train, running an hour behind its published schedule, reached the spot of the bombing an hour after the explosions.

Unruffled by the attempt on his life, the man who has been called "France's Roosevelt" dedicated a plaque in the castle of the Breton dukes, commemorating the fourth centennial of Brittany's union with France.

He was under heavy police guard

Moro Leaders Refuse To End Island Fighting

Jolo, P. I. (Monday), Nov. 21 (A.P.).—Governor General Theodore Roosevelt, conferring today with Moro leaders, was told there was small chance of ending soon the Moro outbreaks in which more than 60 natives and constabulary have been killed recently.

A friendly Moro chieftain informed the governor general the remaining outlaws would not surrender and were awaiting a chance for a surprise attack on the constabulary. Another Moro leader, Paglima Agga, said there were 60 outlaws, led by Iman Arasid, who have sworn by the Koran to die fighting the police.

HUSBAND HELD AFTER FINDING; STORIES DIFFER

MATE LYING IN GRASS WHEN APPREHENDED

Home Near Capitol Heights in Flames; Inquest Is Set Tonight.

The body of a young woman, apparently murdered, was found last night by firemen extinguishing a fire in a burning house located just off Central avenue beyond Capitol Heights, Md.

The woman, identified as Mrs. Margaret Rolland, 36, was found dead under the eaves of her one-and-a-half story frame dwelling in a compartment which was so small that police are still mystified as to how she was placed in it. She was found in a space about two by four feet, the body being doubled up.

According to Constable Earle Blackwell, the body was mutilated and part of an iron stove was lying across her head. Rigor mortis had set in when Fireman Si Ball, of the Seat Pleasant Fire Department, found it after breaking through the roof to get at the fire.

Husband Is Arrested.

The woman's husband, L. C. Rolland, was arrested by Constable Blackwell and State Policeman J. C. Gates, who found him lying on the grass near the house. Firemen had reported to police that Rolland, when they arrived at the house, told them "to get the hell out."

At the time that Rolland was taken into custody, the body had not been found. The body was partially burned, but the police were of the belief that death had occurred before the fire had reached that portion of the dwelling. The floor on which it was found was without furnishings and had not been finished. Apparently Rolland and his wife lived on the first floor.

Conflicting Stories Told.

According to Constable Blackwell, Rolland told conflicting stories when he was apprehended. First, he said he and his wife had not been out during the day. When asked why the woman was fully clothed, even to her hat and coat, he replied she had just returned from an errand.

The fire which brought attention to the tragedy was discovered shortly after 8 o'clock last night. Firemen from Seat Pleasant and Capitol Heights were summoned. Flames partially destroyed the house. They had apparently followed the steps to the attic and ignited the roof. The origin of the flames had not been determined early today.

Nearest House Mile Away.

The Rollands, according to Constable Blackwell, had lived in the house, which was about a mile from the nearest dwelling and on a dirt road, for about a year. Little is known of their location before moving to Capitol Heights. Constable

D. C. Heads Are Determined To Curb Riots of Marchers

Preparing to Combat Any Attempts of Radical Wing to Create Disturbance; Vagrancy Laws May Be Invoked by Commissioners.

A period of watchful waiting will be begun today by the District Commissioners and the Police Department upon the advancing columns of the "hunger marchers"—en route to the Capital for the convening of Congress.

The investigating arms of the Federal Government and its high officials have concerned themselves with the groups headed here.

Determined that individual citizens shall be protected in their constitutional perogatives of protest of grievance, the District authorities are preparing to ferret out and combat attempts to create scenes of violence or worse.

Proponents of the "buddy" plan of practical anarchism are believed to have aligned themselves under the guise of peaceful petitioners with the "hunger marchers" who held a convention here a year ago without any serious disturbance.

The "buddy" plan envisages the strategic alignment of its adherents. One-half of such a contingent emulates peaceful protestants, with the object of disarming police surveillance.

The second half of the "buddy plan" group concerns itself with the placing of bombs and other explosives in public buildings, with the incurring hazard of loss of life and great property damage.

While authoritative advices place advocates of means such as the "bud-

Mrs. Hoover to Be Guest At Chest Meeting Today

Rust and Other Leaders in Campaign Urge Workers to Renew Efforts to Obtain Needed $1,240,221 Before Wednesday Night.

Keenly aware that only 178 days' care has been provided for the unfortunate of Washington next year through contributions to the Community Chest so far, 2,000 Chest workers of the Metropolitan and Special Gifts Units, took advantage of yesterday's fine weather and worked diligently throughout the day in the hope of avoiding a "blue Monday" at today's report meeting. So intense is the interest of the workers in the Chest campaign that some of the keymen of the governmental and group solicitation units, barred from regular solicitation because their organizations were closed, visited their fellow workmen in their homes yesterday so that these units might be able to report today.

Beginning this morning, the entire Chest army of approximately 5,000 persons will swing into concerted action with the avowed purpose of raising the $1,240,221.55, which must still be contributed if the Chest is to reach its goal by Wednesday night, the closing meeting of the campaign. Realizing that they have only three days in which to complete this stupendous task, every worker is preparing for redoubled efforts in order that his particular portion of the Chest army may attain its objective.

ROOSEVELT SPENDS SABBATH AT HOME

Viscount and Lady Astor End Hyde Park Visit With President-Elect.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Gov. Roosevelt's Sunday was like many others he has spent in the village of his birth, attending services at ancient St. James Episcopal Church and receiving visitors at tea in the spacious living room at Krum Elbow.

There were difference, however, in this Sunday "at home." Since his last Sabbath visit here he has been elected President of the United States. On Tuesday he goes to the White House to discuss with President Hoover a pressing international problem, war debts.

Today the distinction and the duty were set aside. Viscount and Lady Astor, overnight guests at the Roosevelt home, went to church with the governor and Mrs. Roosevelt, and Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President-elect's mother.

There were not many persons at the service, and the presence of the President-elect was not noted in the ecclesiastical routine. Many of the parishioners of St. James, which has stood beside the Albany post road since 1811, are owners of estates along the Hudson. When summer fades they move into New York City. The walls of the little church, a mile north of Hyde Park Village, proclaimed the distinguished Paris members—the Ogden Mills, whose latest family head campaigned so vigorously against Mr. Roosevelt, the Vanderbilts, the Archibald Rogers, the Lydig Hoyts.

The Roosevelts and their guests occupied the old family pew, No. 40, near the front of the church, and under wall tablets telling of the membership of earlier Roosevelts back to the Revolutionary War.

Lord and Lady Astor left the Roosevelt home after luncheon for New York. During the afternoon, Basil O'Connor, the governor's former law partner, and Mrs. O'Connor called.

Mr. Roosevelt will leave for New York tomorrow afternoon en route to the White House conference. In New York he will meet with Lieut. Gov. Herbert S. Lehman, the governor-elect, who will occupy the chief executive's seat in Albany during Mr. Roosevelt's two weeks' absence in Georgia.

The President-elect will spend the night at his Sixty-fifth street home and will leave for Washington about 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

during his stay in the city, though thousands lined the streets to cheer him in a great gesture of sympathy.

The Breton autonomists are few in number, but their fanaticism long has been recognized. Last August 7 at Rennes a bas-relief commemorating the union was damaged by a bomb, believed to have been placed by political extremists.

When Herriot was told of the rail bombing, he remarked:

"It probably was the work of the same group responsible for the Rennes bombing. I consider it a demonstration rather than a serious attempt on my life."

Police said it was possible the bombers had not meant to take Herriot's life, since a red lantern was found on the track, some distance back of the damaged spot.

Seven known members of the autonomist group were questioned, including a young woman student known as "The Red Virgin." She and her companions arrived at a Nantes Hotel Saturday and filled out the customary police identity papers in the Breton language.

Tells of Earlier Plot.

The Breton autonomists cling to their old language and customs, refusing to speak French or recognize the French government.

Railroad officers, in charge of patrolling the tracks, were 2 miles distant when they heard the two explosions today. They ran the entire distance, found the rails ripped up for a distance of about 8 feet, then hurried back to halt the approaching train.

The bombing was 15 miles from Nantes opposite a quarry, where the bombers apparently obtained their explosives. The blasts were heard about 5 a. m.

Police scurried over the countryside by fast automobile, trying to track the bombers, but had no success. It was thought the bombers probably motored from Rennes, the center of the autonomist movement.

Herriot, in an interview after reaching Nantes, told of an earlier plot to assassinate him by bomb at Rennes.

"I was to have been assassinated, investigators discovered," he said, "by dropping two bombs from the balcony of the Hotel Commerce into my automobile as it passed.

Journalist Is Deported.

"Police arrested those who took part in the plot, but they were liberated without trial. Among their papers were found passports showing they were prepared to escape into Germany."

Coincident with today's bombing, the government announced deportation of the German journalist, H. Koerber, Paris correspondent for National Socialist newspapers. Koerber was deported for participation in the autonomist movement in Brittany, having been found guilty of participating in the Rennes bombing.

Rain was falling when Herriot's train reached Nantes. He went immediately to Town Hall, then to the Nantes monument to her war dead.

Blamed on Germany.

After inaugurating the plaque he was entertained at luncheon as a guest of the municipality. Following luncheon he inspected progress of the flood prevention work on both branches of the Loire.

He concluded his visit at a private school where he made his debut as a professor at the age of 23, teaching literature. He departed for Paris at 6:45 p. m., his train preceded by a free engine as a precautionary measure.

The premier during his stay in Nantes received scores of messages congratulating him on his escape. One such message was from President Albert Lebrun.

Pleas of 1917 Recalled

Appeals to U. S. for War Funds Were More Impassioned Than Those of Today for Reconsideration of Debt Agreements.

(Associated Press.)

European appeals to the United States in 1917 for funds to combat submarines and save the gold standard were even more impassioned than those fifteen years later for reconsideration of agreements under which the funds should be repaid.

The frantic messages which resulted in many loans now included in the $11,000,000,000 in war debts owed the United States were made public yesterday by the State Department.

Dispatches of Lord Balfour, British Secretary of State for foreign affairs; Walter Hines Page, American Ambassador to London; many other continental statesmen and Admiral W. S. Sims, show the pressure under which President Wilson and Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury sanctioned loans of approximately $4,000,000,000 that year to Great Britain, France, Italy, Russia, Belgium and Serbia.

On June 28, 1917, Ambassador Page said, "Financial disaster to all the European allies is imminent unless the United States Government advances to the British enough money to pay for British purchases in the United States," and added:

"Unless we come to their rescue we are all in danger of disaster. Great Britain will have to abandon the gold standard.

"Antisubmarine craft which can not be assembled in the submarine zone almost immediately may come too late. There is therefore a possibility that this war may become a war between Germany and the United States alone."

Admiral Sims, special assistant to Page, reported from Queenstown, Ireland, on June 26 that "the war will be won or lost in this submarine zone within a few months."

On April 6, the day the United States declared war against Germany, Page sent to Secretary Lansing a note from Balfour saying:

"Our (the United Kingdom's) power to finance, not merely ourselves but all our allies, has inevitable limitations and if the burden could be diminished by direct arrangements between the United States and the various allied countries immense assistance would thereby be given toward the efficient conduct of the war."

The report of the American mission, headed by Col. E. M. House, which attended the interallied conference of November 29 to December 3 and dated December 15, 1917, was extremely pessimistic.

"The supreme war council as at present constituted is almost a farce, the report stated, over House's signature.

"There is but little coordination anywhere between the allies," the report continued. "Jealousies are everywhere rife. None of them at heart like one another, and I doubt whether any of them like us. * * * Fortunately, a like condition exists in the central alliance. * * *

"Unless a change for the better comes the allies can not win, and Germany may. For six months or more the ground has been steadily slipping away from the allies.

"Outside of England and France, it is questionable whether the rest of the alliance is a liability or an asset. It would certainly have been better if none of the smaller nations in southeastern Europe had entered the war. Greece and Italy would have been more useful as neutrals than as allies. They are a drag on both the men and resources of the entente. England would have come out of the war better if she had fought the central empires alone. She would have taken the German colonies and driven her commerce from the seas."

LYTTON COMMISSION REPORT RAPPED IN JAPANESE REPLY

break of September 18, 1931. Then, continues the Japanese version, a portion of the Japanese-owned South Manchuria Railway was dynamited by Chinese soldiers, which precipitated the occupation of Mukden by the Japanese and other zones outside the leased territory.

Japan deals at length with the Lytton Commission charges that she was responsible for establishment of the new state of Manchukuo, and clearly states that she has no intention of abandoning her interest there, regardless of the commission's attitude.

"Japan can not afford to leave her relations with Manchukuo in a state of instability," the Tokyo document sets forth. "She, accordingly, considers that the general recognition of Manchukuo, and a general cooperation of its development is the only means of stabilizing conditions in Manchuria and of bringing peace to the Far East."

Declared Popular Move.

The movement that led to creation of Manchukuo was "a genuine, spontaneous, popular and natural one," says the summary, and sponsored by Chinese "who had been systematically 'squeezed,' oppressed and defrauded by their rulers."

The Japanese concede that it may probably be true, as the Lytton report says, that such a movement in favor of a change of government could not have been carried through had it not been for the presence of Japanese troops. The troops, the Japanese assert, were on hand merely in the exercise of a lawful right of self-defense, and if the independence movement took advantage of the conditions thus created, that altered in no wise the spontaneity of the movement."

"There are many instances in other continents," the Japanese explain without mentioning specific names, "where independence has been proclaimed by the presence of foreign forces, and there that independence has never been questioned."

(An Associated Press Tokyo dispatch Saturday said it had been officially stated that Japan would remind the Geneva Council that Manchukuo was not the first state separated from its parent state and given independence through the action of another power. "I can not affirm," the informant was quoted as saying, "the assertions in vernacular newspapers that our reply to the Lytton report will cite Panama and Esthonia in this connection, but certainly Panama is one of the incidents we had in mind. I can assure you, however, this portion of the document is no wise construable as derogatory to the United States.")

Nine-Power Treaty Cited.

Regarding the nine-power treaty, to which both China and Japan are signatories, the Japanese contend that "if in the due fulfillment of her lawful rights, a signatory power finds herself in Chinese territory, she can not be responsible for the consequences," and adds:

"If these consequences impair Chinese sovereignty or integrity, it is not she who is to blame. Even supposing, therefore, that Manchuria under Gen. Chang Hsueh-Liang the deposed ruler) was really an integral part of China, still Japan can not be answerable for the consequences of her proper and necessary action."

The Japanese government calls the special attention of league members to the restoration of peace and order in Manchuria. The only troublemakers remaining, the Tokyo brief contends, are several Chinese forces in the north which are being supported with funds of the Nanking government to nag the Japanese.

Rejects Withdrawal Plan.

As for the Lytton commission suggestion that the Japanese withdraw in favor of an autonomous government to be created under the Nanking Nationalists, the Japanese hold this "would amount in practice to a disguised international control, and could not be acceptable to Manchukuo or Japan."

Japan's argument in league circles will be that with an efficient Japanese administration, Manchuria will set an example for Chinese which eventually will clear the way for settlement of the far greater question of China herself as well as the Manchuria difficulties.

The Tokyo answer is the combined work of the foreign office and the war department, which have been at the task for weeks. It contains some 27,000 words. The text will be announced today in Tokyo and Geneva.

Japan Denies Intention Of Refuting Quiz Report

Tokyo, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Gen. Araki, minister of war, asserted today Japan did not intend to refute the Lytton commission report on Manchuria, which the council of the League of Nations will discuss tomorrow.

"Japan's observations are not intended to refute the report," the general said, "but to supplement its deficiences and to remove misunderstandings."

He added the Manchurian problem was disposed of as far as Japan and Manchukuo were concerned and Japan was determined to pursue a settled policy.

Meanwhile, a mass meeting of 10,000 persons called by the National Federation of Political Parties and Organizations, passed a resolution of grim determination to oppose any move calculated to run counter to Japan's national policy in Manchuria.

Count Uchida, foreign minister, voiced further official reaction to the Lytton report in an interview in which he said that "we have not sent delegates to the League of Nations to argue. We have sent them to lead the league to a true understanding of the complications of the situation in the Far East."

The resolution passed by the mass meeting was cabled to Geneva. It declared that as Manchukuo now is a full-fledged independent state, and inasmuch as the League of Nations desires to contribute to enduring peace in the Far East, the league ought to recognize Manchukuo immediately and thereafter wash its hands of the Manchurian problem.

Suspect Is Hanged By Louisiana Mob

Lynching of Man Accused by Girls Revealed as Body Is Found.

Wisner, La., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The lynching of Williams House, 26-year-old Negro, by a band of men, who took him from the Wisner town marshal yesterday, was revealed today with the finding of his body suspended from a tree near here.

The man was arrested Thursday by Marshal R. L. Graham after two young women had complained House insulted them. The prisoner was taken to jail at Winnsboro by the marshal for safe keeping. Yesterday afternoon Graham and P. C. Sutton, also of Wisner, went to Winnsboro and took charge of House with the intention of returning him here for trial.

Two miles from Winnsboro, Graham said, a band of about fifteen men stopped his car and forced him to give up his prisoner and pistol. Sheriff Allen Price, of Winnsboro, said the man's body, with two bullet wounds in it, was found hanging from a tree this morning.

10 Prisoners Escape New Hampshire Jail

Portsmouth, N. H., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Ten of the 40 prisoners in the Rockingham County Jail in Portsmouth escaped late Saturday night after some one sawed through a door from the outside and opened the doors of a tier of ten cells.

One of the ten was captured by the Lynn, Mass., police this morning before Sheriff Ceylon Spinnery, of Portsmouth, was aware of the jail break. He is Harry E. Whitten, 45, of Lynn, who had been held while awaiting trial on a charge of stealing chickens.

Tennessee Town Quiet After Mine Disorders

Wilder, Tenn., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The scene of a series of coal mine labor disorders within recent weeks, Wilder was quiet today as State policemen patrolled the strike area and stood guard at their improvised headquarters.

The Sunday quiet was disturbed only once when a sightseer from Cookeasville was arrested on a charge of drunkenness.

THREE GENERATIONS TO PAY WAR DEBTS

France Will Have Received $3,858,000,000 Gift if Payments Stop.

Paris, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Three generations of taxpayers in France, or in the United States, will have to pay the French war debt to America.

The debt was fixed in 1926 at $6,847,674,104.17. Negotiations between Washington and Paris may determine soon whether France shall continue to pay off this huge sum for the next 56 years, or whether it finally will be paid by the grandchildren of the present generation in America.

If France is absolved of the debt, or defaults on it, American taxpayers will have to dig down and pay.

The money loaned to France was borrowed from the American people by the American Government, mainly through the sale of Liberty bonds. And if France does not pay, the American Government still must redeem its pledge and reimburse the people who had faith in its promises during the World War. If the Government must pay back the Liberty loans, the money for such payment will come from the American taxpayers.

Made After Armistice.

American loans to France began almost immediately after the entry of the United States into the war on April 6, 1917. From that time until November 30, 1918, the United States loaned France $2,010,000,000.

The loans, however, did not stop with the armistice. Between December 1, 1918, and November 1, 1920, the United States advanced France an additional $956,000,000, bringing the total indebtedness up to $2,966,000,000.

Meanwhile, France agreed to take over America's surplus war stocks in France. Under an agreement dated August 1, 1919, these war stocks were sold to France on credit or $407,000,000. The French government subsequently sold the stocks and the money thus obtained was accounted for in the annual budgets.

The stocks ranged from motor trucks to women's corsets, from canned beef to scales for weighing babies. They brought the total French indebtedness to $3,373,000,000. On the war loans and the war stocks purchase, France agreed to pay 5 per cent interest.

By the time an agreement governing repayment of the debt had been reached on April 29, 1926, this interest had grown to $685,000,000, thus making the total debt $4,058,000,000. The debt agreement was negotiated by Andrew W. Mellon, then Secretary of the Treasury, and Henry Berenger, then French Ambassador to Washington. French cynics commented that the agreement was "98 per cent Mellon and 2 per cent Berenger."

The debt agreement was a source of controversy almost from the beginning. French deputies raised the cry of "shylock!" But American officials, including Mellon, said the settlement was extremely generous, since it wiped out approximately 50 per cent of the debt.

Under the agreement France was to pay $6,847,674,104 over a period of 62 years. This sum comprised the principal of $4,058,000,000 and interest on the principal for 62 years. The interest payment was arranged as follows:

No Interest for Five Years.

No interest during the first 5 years following signing of the agreement; 1 per cent during the next 10 years; 2 per cent during the next 10 years; 2½ per cent during the next 8; 3 per cent during the next 7, and 3½ per cent during the remaining 22 years.

This interest arrangement was the basis for the American claim that a large part of the debt had been wiped out. France had agreed originally to pay 5 per cent. The difference on such a huge sum over a long period, it was emphasized, was equivalent to a reduction in the actual debt.

In the second place, America contended, the total of $6,847,674,104 merely represented a principal of $2,008,122,624 plus interest of 4¼ per cent over a 62-year period. In other words, France was merely paying the United States $2,008,122,624 instead of the $4,058,000,000 which she actually owed. Thus while, theoretically, the debt had not been cut, the favorable interest rates had actually reduced it by more than 50 per cent.

Since the agreement became effective France has paid $200,000,000. During the fiscal year 1932-33 she is due to pay $60,000,000. Of this amount $19,261,432.50 is due December 15, and the French government has asked that payment be postponed.

Another $19,261,432.50 is due June 15, next year. These two sums each represent half the annual interest on the debt. In addition, $21,477,135 is due next June 15, on the principal.

If payments should stop for good and all now, France will have received a clear gift of $3,858,000,000 from the United States.

Goods Found, Mail Robbery Indicated

Packages Found in Woods Near Fairfax; Stamps Are Canceled.

Sheriff E. P. Kirby, of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday received a quantity of goods, which it is believed was stolen from the mails. The packages were addressed to different persons at Catlett, Va., and were from mail order houses in Philadelphia. Sheriff Kirby says he believes the goods are worth about $20.

The packages were found in a woods between Fairfax and Legato, Va., near Lee highway, by some men living in Legato. They reported their discovery to the Fairfax police. An old suit of clothes, an overcoat and an old pair of shoes were found with the packages, indicating that the persons who abandoned the packages had changed clothes. The sheriff believes he recovered only a portion of the goods.

The Postoffice Department was notified last night, but could not recall any goods of that nature being stolen from the mails. The stamps on the packages had been canceled.

Maj. Bryan, Veteran Flier, Dies in Crash

Los Angeles, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Maj. John C. Bryan, veteran pilot and a member of the "Early Birds" organization of air pioneers, was killed today when his plane crashed from an altitude of about 2,000 feet. He was about 40 years old.

Byrnes Would Halt Choices of Hoover

States Roosevelt Should Name Men Who Will Serve Under Him.

Spartanburg, S. C., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, announced today he would ask the first Democratic Senate caucus at the December session of Congress to agree not to confirm any recess appointments made by President Hoover. He said these included several appointments to the Home Loan Bank Board, the Tariff Commission and other bodies.

"President-elect Roosevelt should have the privilege of appointing persons to serve in his administration and on whom he will depend for the success of his administration," Byrnes said.

Local appointments, such as postmasters, would be included in the ban, under the junior South Carolina senator's plan, although he said he particularly had in mind offices of national scope. There are about 25 appointments of the latter class to go before the Senate in December, he explained.

REBELS ESTABLISH MANCHURIA REGIME

Oppose Japanese-Sponsored Rule in Northwest Area; New Fighting Near.

Mukden, Manchuria, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—While the League of Nations was preparing today to resume debate on the Manchurian question, the Japanese position in this territory was becoming increasingly difficult. The most serious situation today was in the northwest, where insurgents have established their own government in opposition to the Japanese-sponsored Manchukuo regime.

Gen. Su Ping-Wen, holding forth at Manchuli, near the Soviet border, has bluntly refused to negotiate for the release of his 245 Japanese captives.

Japanese troops and air forces are flowing northward, preparing to attack Gen. Su's well-armed forces, estimated to total 5,000 men and enjoying great tactical advantages under winter conditions.

Gen. Nobuyoshi Muto, the Japanese commander, has indicated it may be necessary to sacrifice Gen. Su's hostages in order to crush the rebellion. The Soviet government intervened in an effort to have the prisoners evacuated to Russian territory. Women and children were released, but the Japanese men were held.

Meanwhile, Chinese irregulars continued to menace other areas in Manchuria, heightening Japanese anxiety. Railroad wrecks and holdups and kidnapings have occurred less frequently, but insurgents recently have resorted to incendiarism. Since August it has been estimated the Japanese lost at least $1,000,000 worth of airplanes in Mukden and elsewhere through arson.

Besides mutinies in the Manchukuo army, the Japanese are also confronted with rebellion by part of the Manchukuo navy on the upper Sungari River. Many Japanese admit that Manchuria has proved a bigger problem from a military and financial standpoint than Tokyo envisaged.

Repeated campaigns by Gen. Muto's command, estimated at 55,000 troops, against about a quarter of a million scattered Chinese insurgents appear to have only slightly reduced the latter's ranks, while the loyalty of Manchukuo troops always had been open to doubt.

The entire area northward from Tsitsihar, about one-fourth of Manchuria, has come under control of insurgents. The Manchukuo government's authority has seemed to extend only to cities and railway areas patrolled by Japanese soldiers.

Carbon Dioxide Kills Three Mine Operators

Sonora, Calif., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Three men were killed by carbon dioxide gas in the Saratoga Acres gold mine, a mile north of here, last night. The victims were George and Reed Weston, brothers, and George Weston, jr., lessees of the mine.

Volunteer rescuers penetrated the shaft and recovered the body of Reed Weston, but the deadly gas prevented further progress into the shaft until a State mine rescue crew, equipped with gas masks, arrived from Jackson, 27 miles away, early today.

M'ADOO SAYS NATION NEEDS NEW THOUGHT

He Feels Farmer Is Real Key to Return of Prosperity.

Los Angeles, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—William Gibbs McAdoo, senator-elect from California, believes the United States may have to "forget some hoary formulas" of Government in restoring the purchasing power of the farmer and bringing prosperity back.

Asked to name the most pressing subject to be considered by the next administration, the long, lean former Secretary of the Treasury answered without hesitation, "Agriculture."

The first Democratic senator California has had in twelve years, disclaimed any thought of speaking for the incoming administration.

"I am convinced that legislation in behalf of the farmer is possible," he said. "We attempt to take care of other business, why not agriculture?"

McAdoo said that when the farmer's dollar is given back to him he will spend it and all business will benefit.

"The farmers need everything," he said, "clothing, machinery and other necessities, and luxuries as well, but they can not buy, for they have no money. Given reasonable prices for their products, their money will reach every avenue of business."

Wheat Tariff Useless.

Taking wheat and cotton as examples, he said the situation is the same as would exist if the steel manufacturers had to sell their products in this country at the world price.

"If the producers of wheat and cotton were protected, so that they could sell the amount of wheat and cotton consumed in the United States at remunerative prices, they could then take their chances, as manufacturers do, on the disposition of their surplus in the competitive markets of the world.

"There is a tariff duty of 42 cents a bushel on wheat, but it is ineffective because the surplus wheat production and not the tariff controls the price. There is no tariff on short staple cotton, but if there were it would be no more effective under present conditions than the tariff on wheat.

"The American farmer sells in an unprotected market and buys in a protected one. He is outside of our tariff wall when he sells and inside of it when he buys. He loses at both ends.

New Formula Needed.

"That this situation must be remedied before we can have a return of prosperity is obvious, and I am convinced we may have to forget some hoary formulas, but this, I believe, can be done.

"The salvation of the wheat and cotton farmers of the United States revolves around a tariff on these commodities sufficiently high to preserve for the producers the home market against outside competition. This must be accompanied by Federal regulation which will enable the farmers to get the full benefit of the tariff protection awarded to them on that part of their crop consumed in the United States.

"The present tariff duty on wheat is merely a gesture. The farmer receives no benefit from it for the simple reason that no means have been provided for transferring to his pocket the paper protection thus offered to him.

"To correct this will be the first duty of the new administration, in my opinion, and I am confident, not only that it can be done, but that it will be."

WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN HOME AFTER FIRE

Blackwell said Rolland is a commercial painter and a former marine.

Rolland was taken to the Marlboro Jail after the body was found. The woman's body was taken to the Ritchie undertaking establishment at Ritchie, Md.

An inquest will be held at 7:30 p. m. today by Magistrate Oscar Poore in Capitol Heights, Blackwell said. No charge is expected to be placed against Rolland, pending outcome of this inquest.

PRESIDENT HOOVER PREPARES FOR PARLEY WITH ROOSEVELT

extension or a revival of the War Debt Commission. This would leave open only a demand for the December 15 payments—an open and shut stand of payment or default.

The President has been represented by high members of his Administration as definitely opposed to another year moratorium. He has been described at the same time as favoring a more strict attitude toward debtor nations, and as recognizing that some European countries can not pay.

Majority in Opposition.

Although all the thirteen Republican and Democratic senators and representatives, who have been called by the President to a White House war debt parley Wednesday, have not yet reached the Capital, a majority of those now here have stated opposition to debt revision or suspension.

Senators Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, and George (Democrat), Georgia, members of the Senate finance committee, have held that foreign debtors should pay, while Representatives Rainey (Democrat), Illinois, and Collier (Democrat), Mississippi, members of the House ways and means committee, have made repeated statements that there should be "no change in the debt situation."

Vice President-elect Garner, another who has repeatedly opposed moratorium, cancellation or recreation of the War Debt Commission, is scheduled to arrive in the Capital tomorrow, a few hours before Mr. Roosevelt. They will undoubtedly discuss debts as the President-elect now plans to stay here overnight and possibly part of Wednesday.

War Debt Commission.

In his discussion of debts with the President-elect, Mr. Hoover likely will speak of the War Debt Commission, the revival of which he has previously recommended, and of the resolution adopted by Congress at the time of the moratorium declaring against cancellation or reduction.

In his telegraphic invitation to the New York Governor the President spoke of negotiations with foreign debtors, and of the question of disarmament in connection with this problem.

"Any negotiation of this question on the basis of the requests of these governments," he told Mr. Roosevelt, "is limited by the resolution of Congress. And if there is to be any change in the attitude of Congress it will be greatly affected by the views of those members who recognize you as their leader and who will properly desire your counsel and advice."

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, said in Little Rock he was opposed to any postponement of payments when due and suggested that if Mr. Hoover felt legislative action was necessary a special session should be called immediately. He and other Democratic leaders will confer with the President-elect at Warm Springs, Ga., later in the month.

Before shifting his attention to debt problems Mr. Hoover has been concentrating principally upon the Federal budget. Although he has not concluded his consideration of it, a major step was taken Saturday at a special Cabinet meeting.

After its adjournment, the White House issued a statement that reductions in appropriations totaling $700,000,000 had been settled upon for the next fiscal year.

$550,000,000 Net Slash.

It was explained, however, that because of increases of about $150,000,000 in such items as interest and amortization on the public debt, together with tax refunds, the net reduction would be near $550,000,000.

Meanwhile, an echo of the $2,885,363,299 deficit with which the Government ended the 1932 fiscal year last June 30 was heard yesterday when J. Clawson Roop, director of the budget, made public his annual report.

It was merely the formal report to the President, and covered the same ground that was announced by Secretary Mills last July. Roop said the total cash receipts for the 1932 year were $2,121,228,006, and expenditures $5,006,590,305.

Metropolitan Hotel Fades Today at Public Auction

Furnishings, Bar and All to Go Under Hammer to Make Way for Finer Building; Once Was Pride of Washington.

(Associated Press.)

The rap of the auctioneer's hammer echoing through musty-smelling mahogany halls today will ring the knell of a last survivor of Pennsylvania avenue's famous old hostelries.

Across the street from where bricks and bullets flew last summer in the Bonus army eviction riots, the old Metropolitan Hotel is about to be torn down and its furnishings sold at auction, bar and all.

Its passing is just an incident of the emergence of a new Pennsylvania avenue resplendent with Government buildings and wide landscaped lawns, but it calls up images out of the past.

The old place, once the pride of Washington, is a bit seedy looking now. It stands in an atmosphere of Chinatown, Japanese bazaars, hash houses and down-and-outers.

Passing it, one probably never would guess that many of the Nation's great passed through its pillared portals in the nineteenth century.

In a corner of the lobby a bus company is doing business. At one side is the barroom. Quite evidently an unsuccessful attempt once was made to transform it into a lunch room. A steam table is cut into the center of the big mahogany bar, with the brass rail conspicuously missing.

"Believe it or not, Abraham Lincoln once slept in this hotel," reads a sign above a fly-specked list of sandwiches and "specials for today."

Here, too, was the residence of Anson Burlingame, appointed Minister to China in 1861 by Abraham Lincoln and later named by the Chinese government as its representative in dealing with this and other nations.

Before it was rebuilt and named the Metropolitan, the hotel was kept by a colorful figure, one Jesse B. Brown.

"The prince of landlords," he styled himself and tradition records that the hospitable Mr. Brown, wearing a large white apron, presided personally at table and that there were served thereon without extra charge bounteaus decanters of brandy and whisky.

Under the name of the Indian Queen the house flaunted a large swinging sign bearing a brightly painted picture intended to represent Pocahontas.

There in 1841, John Tyler took the oath of office as President of the United States. Sam Houston, the Texas pioneer, is listed among the guests.

LEAGUE COUNCIL TODAY BEGINS STUDY OF LYTTON QUIZ REPORT

the first move in the campaign resulting in Japanese occupation of Manchuria, was an act of legitimate self-defense authorized by the terms of the Kellogg pact. The observations likewise directly deny the Lytton commission's conclusion that the organization of the new state of Manchukuo was the work of Japanese officials and was without support of the Manchurian population.

The document asserts that the movement for proclamation of independence in Manchuria was genuine, spontaneous, popular and natural."

The Tokyo government says that the establishment of a special regime in Manchuria, as recommended by the Lytton commission, would "amount in practice to disguised international control over Manchuria and this is certain to be rejected by Manchukuo. Nor from the standpoint of Japan can these suggestions be regarded acceptable."

Lytton Quiz Methods Scored.

The memorandum said that Japan finds the Lytton commission's proposal for settlement in general inacceptable. It criticized the commission's method of gathering evidence and asserted that items of information from unimpeachable sources were disregarded while undue credit was accorded testimony from obscure or unknown sources.

Tokyo, however, supported the commission's analysis which tended to show that China is in a state of disorder.

The observations were very emphatic in justifying incidents of September 18, 1931, and said that the commission was quite right in saying that the Japanese had a definite plan of military operation, adding that this was always true of an efficient army in the face of hostile forces.

The Chinese attacked the night of September 18, 1931, following an explosion on the South Manchurian Railway, which had been arranged by the Chinese, Tokyo maintained.

Senate Stand Cited.

"The commission thought it its duty to add 'military operations of Japanese troops during this night can not be regarded as measures of legitimate self-defense.' It is entirely impossible to accept this opinion which must be a surprising one to any one belonging to those countries parties to the Briand-Kellogg Treaty for outlawry of war."

Japanese observations then quote the United States Senate resolution passed at the time of ratification of the Briand-Kellogg pact to the effect that "it is well understood that to exercise the right of self-protection may and frequently does extend in its effect beyond the limits of territorial jurisdiction of the state exercising it."

Regarding Manchurian independence, Tokyo insisted that "Manchuria for Manchurians" is an ancient slogan and that "the conclusions of the commission run counter to historic elements, to psychological and material causes which have called forth a surge of latent sentiment and to all facts which go to prove the spontaneous character of the independence movement among the people of Manchuria which has had for its result the foundation of a new state.

"Assertions that the chief agency in bringing independence was an organ of Kwantung army headquarters, that a group of Japanese officials conceived, organized and carried through this movement and that activities of Japanese officials were 'a most effective' factor in creating Manchukuo are assertions destitute of foundation and contrary to express assurance of this government and entirely unsupported by the evidence."

The memorandum rejected the proposal for a special regime and for an international gendarmerie in Manchuria with this phrase: "It could never meet the desires of Manchurians and would be a source of great anxiety to the Japanese government, as it would foment unrest and disturbances in that region."

The Chinese counter-blast to the Japanese memorandum declared that "we detest military, we hate war and we long for peace, but if necessary we will embrace the evil of militarism in order to free our territory from an invader."

Dr. W. W. Yen, Chinese representative here, who issued the statement, praised the Washington nine-power treaty and Secretary Stimson's stand on nonrecognition of the fruits of aggression.

REGRET MESSAGES FLOOD JONES' HOME

Hoover Sends Condolences; Senator's Body to Be Cremated.

Seattle, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Messages of condolence, among them one from President Hoover, told today of the honor and respect held for the late Senator Wesley L. Jones as the family made final preparations for the funeral.

With a delegation of 15 senators from Western States named by Vice President Curtis to represent the Senate, the services will be held at 3 p. m., tomorrow at the first Methodist Church. For two hours preceding the ceremony the body will lie in state.

The former pastor of the Prospect Congregational Church, which Senator Jones and his wife joined many years ago when they first came to Seattle, the Rev. Carl H. Veazie, will officiate. Later the body will be cremated.

As chairman of the senatorial delegation, many of whom may be unable to attend because of the distance to travel, Senator Clarence C. Dill, the State's junior senator, will represent them. Representative Ralph A. Horr, of Seattle, has been appointed by Speaker John N. Garner to act for the House of Representatives.

In addition, men high in State and city affairs will attend.

Senator Jones, defeated in his recent campaign for reelection by Homar T. Bone, Tacoma Democrat, died peacefully shortly after midnight Saturday at a private sanitarium, to which he had retired for treatment. His death, which occurred in his seventieth year, was attributed to general systemic poisoning.

In addition to his widow, a son, Harry B. Jones, Seattle attorney, and a daughter, Mrs. Arthur Coffin, of Yakima, Wash., survive him.

Toledo University Head Dies of Septic Throat

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Dr. Henry John Doermann, 42, president of the University of Toledo, died today of complications resulting from a septic sore throat. He was a native of North Carolina and received his early education there and in Chicago. He was a graduate of the University of Minnesota and took his master's degree and doctorate at Harvard.

His posts in various educational institutions included the directorate of Hampton Normal and Industrial School, Hampton, Va., and an instructorship at Harvard. He became president of the University of Toledo in December, 1927.

Woodcock Says Robins Not 'Leggers' Victim

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Asserting that the circumstances under which Raymond Robins was found in North Carolina a few days ago "conclusively disproved" theories that his disappearance was the work of bootleggers, Amos W. W. Woodcock, Director of the Bureau of Prohibition, said today "our responsibility ended when he was found."

In discussing the case at his Eastern Shore home here, the director jocularly remarked that the bootlegger kidnaping theory was "rather a slander on the profession, wasn't it?"

Gutenberg Bible Memorial Is Being Published by U. S.

History of Oldest Type-Set Book and Story of Its Passage to This Country Is Told in Booklet to Be Distributed Soon.

(Associated Press.)

Amid the bustling Government Printing Office's daily tasks, a booklet memorial to the Gutenberg Bible—oldest type-set book of them all—is emerging in antique style, binding and coloring as a finely drawn piece of modern art.

The booklet commemorates acquisition of the Bible along with other incunabula in the Vollbehr collection two years ago by the Library of Congress. Among other things, it tells the story of the Bible's passage to this country and considerable about that historic volume.

The work of George Henry Carter, public printer of the United States, there will be only a limited edition of 420 copies to appeal to collectors, and it will be off the press shortly after Thanksgiving. The price has not been set, but whatever it is the proceeds will go to the Government, which bears the expense of the printing.

Bound in parchment, the volume gives the illusion of antiquity because of that, the old cloister type used, and the brilliantly illumined red and blue initial letters, just as in the Bible. But the text, instead of being ancient Latin, amazingly unfolds as readable English.

Carter was inspired to its making by an address titled "The Vollbehr Incunabula and the Book of Books," given last June by Frederick W. Ashley, chief assistant librarian of the Library of Congress.

Dr. Ashley, with a wealth of wit and anecdote, had chronicled the coming of the Bible from St. Paul Monastery in the Austrian Province of Carinthia to Washington and had penned an appreciation of the $1,500,000 worth of incunabula which Congress bought from Dr. Otto H. F. Vollbehr.

Carter conceived the idea of publishing this address on handmade paper, using type, page-formation, and illumined initial lettering after the style of the Bible itself.

"I thought a collection of books for which this Government paid $1,500,000 was worthy of such commemoration," Carter explained.

Dr. Vollbehr carefully conned its proof-pages and pronounced it: "One of the very finest printings ever made."

Like the old Bible, sections occasionally begin with two or three lines of solid red or blue, to give emphasis to the text. Handsome illustrations show Dr. Vollbehr with the Bible, and the Bible in its case in the Library of Congress.

One passage tells how dignified Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, eluded a writ of attachment at the New York dock by having two men from the library, armed with authority from the Treasury in Washington, meet his ship in New York Bay, take charge of the trunk containing the Bible and the other works and take it off before docking.

B. E. F. in Scottdale, Pa. Hotel, Vacant for 20 Years

Scottdale, Pa., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Lights shine through the windows of the Commercial Hotel tonight, fires blaze in grates in the rooms, the smell of cooking food fills corridors—the hostelry is inhabited for the first time in twenty years.

Members of the Bonus Expeditionary Force ordered from Camp Sherry, near Uniontown, by the owner of the wooded tract, have moved into winter quarters in the hotel.

The old Commercial was built 40 years ago across from the railroad station. Silver dollars clattered across its bars and rooms were filled during boom days of the mills. Then business dropped off.

While rain and sleet added dreariness to the already warped and desolate frame structure, the B. E. F.—35 men, 2 women and 4 children—moved in at the invitation of W. W. Seamans, the owner, yesterday.

Mops and brooms soon removed the dirt; fires threw light and warmth.

A man and his wife and child moved into the bridal suite. Other members of the force took adjoining rooms.

C. H. Titterington, Third Area commander, is in charge of the winter home.

Cult King Admits Sacrifice Slaying

Confesses He Killed Man on Improvised Altar at Detroit Home.

Detroit, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Police, investigating an apparent murder, today elicited from the self-styled "king" of a weird cult a confession that he selected and killed a sacrificial victim on an improvised altar at his home.

The confession was attributed to Robert Harris, 44-year-old Negro. Harris said his "religious order" has a membership of about 100 Negroes in Detroit.

The victim was James J. Smith, 40, also a Negro. Harris admitted, police said, that he crushed Smith's head with the rear axle of an automobile, then stabbed him through the heart. Police, recalling the slaying of Benny Evangelista, leader of a fantastic religious cult, his wife and four children here in 1929, said they would take Harris' palm prints to determine whether he was the wielder of the ax that killed the Evangelistas.

Cafe Robber Is Held Under $10,000 Bond

New York, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—James Clark, 21, who said he formerly lived at 5426 Virginia avenue, Los Angeles, was arraigned at police headquarters today on charges of assault, robbery and violation of the Sullivan anti-gun law. He was held in $10,000 bail for examination Tuesday.

Clark, who told police he is homeless, held up the cashier of a restaurant Saturday and seized a package containing $2,800. While fleeing, he was tackled by Florentine Gonzales, 20, a busboy, who was shot in the arm, but managed to disarm Clark.

Japanese Seize City From Chinese Force

Chankchun, Manchuria (Monday), Nov. 21 (U.P.).—Japanese troops today captured the Manchurian city of Paichuan from Chinese under Gen. Teng Wen. Four columns of Japanese soldiers pursued the remnants of Teng Wen's army after routing it.

The victory, military authorities said, ended a menace to the Taitsihar-Koshan, the Hulun-Hailun and the Harbin-Taitsihar railway lines.

GLASSFORD HAILED IN BALTIMORE TALK

Denies Communist Menace in Bonus Invasion Here; Heard by 1,200.

Baltimore, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, former police head in the National Capital, was enthusiastically received here today by about 1,200 who attended the Baltimore open forum meeting, as he ridiculed the attempts he said had been made to exaggerate the Communist influences among the bonus army in Washington.

Speaking on "the inside story of the B. E. F. march on Washington," the former Washington police head asserted that "attempting to chloroform an alderman" was the most serious offense on the police record of John T. Pace, one of the leaders of the Communist contingent of the Washington bonus army group.

He denied that Pace and his followers were dangerous characters, and said:

"I found Pace a very respectable sort of man, even though he did have a police record."

Glassford asserted that the "never more than 210 Communists, or so-called Communists, among the 22,000 or 23,000 bonus marchers," who were in Washington, were "well behaved," except that they insisted on picketing the White House.

He said he carried out orders prohibiting picketing at the Executive Mansion, and related that when he wanted to get out of town for a week-end during the time the Communists attempted their picket, by mutual agreement he and Pace arranged an armistice on picketing until he returned. He added that Pace kept his word.

D. C. HEADS AWAIT HUNGER MARCHERS

dy plan" in the ranks of the hunger marchers, the Commissioners indicate no tendency toward curbing of constitutional rights.

The problem of what to do with hunger marchers who might become a burden upon the city is still undecided. Firm decision has been made to provide no food, no housing, no parking space for conveying trucks.

Vagrancy laws might be invoked, it was indicated by sources close to the Commissioners. Other legal means are being sought to take care of any serious situation that might arise.

Pinchot Against Marches.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 20 (A.P.).—Asserting that marches on Washington are not the best way to get Federal unemployment relief, Gov. Pinchot said today that nevertheless he would treat such marchers "precisely as I would treat any other American citizens going about their lawful business."

He said the State could not provide for them as it did during the first bonus march on the National Capital, but that they would not get "the brutal treatment which was inflicted on the bonus army in Washington."

The governor said groups of jobless men and women "are or will be" en route to Washington to petition Congress for relief and that many would pass through Pennsylvania.

Advocates Federal Aid.

"For more than a year I have repeatedly and vigorously advocated Federal relief for the unemployed," he said. "But I am convinced that these marches are not the best way to get at it.

"My personal views on the matter, however, will have no effect on my official conduct. * * *

"Last summer, when the first bonus marchers came through Pennsylvania, the State was able to give some assistance. This time, because of the urgent need of all State resources to care for our own unemployed, Pennsylvania will not be able to give assistance of any sort. * * * But the Commonwealth will make no attempt to stop them from coming through Pennsylvania so long as they obey the law and provide for themselves."

Former B. E. F. Secretary Opposed to New Marches

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The Troy Record tonight quotes Emory P. Robinson, who said he served as secretary of the Bonus Expeditionary Force in Washington, as urging any persons planning a new march on Washington to stay at home.

Robinson was quoted in an interview as saying that the bonus marchers last summer "were used as pawns" for the personal advantage of their leaders.

"They used the needy and destitute veterans as pawns for their own personal profit," the newspaper quotes Robinson as saying. "They slept in snug hotel rooms while we were left to sleep in the mud at camp. They had hotel dinners and we went begging."

The former marcher who has just returned to Troy from Washington, was further quoted as saying that "buck private officials," by "mishandling the whole affair, were responsible as much as Government officials for the death in camp of two small children and a veteran."

Lake Victims' Bodies Found.

Camdenton, Mo., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Bodies of Dr. William A. Schutz, Kansas City physician, and Paul L. Jones, of Springfield, Ill., were found today in the Lake of the Ozarks, more than three weeks after the men drowned as a result of the capsizing of a motor boat.

YOUNG TERRORIST ADMITS SLAYINGS

in the southwest section of the city. Police were checking tonight to determine their identities.

"But I am insane!" he shouted after signing the confessions which climaxed fourteen hours of questioning. "You can't do anything to me."

Crimes police said Varecha confessed included:

A holdup August 31 in the new city district in which he and a companion kidnaped a girl from her escort and attacked her, the wounding of James F. McElligott, who resisted Varecha's attempts at robbery while he sat in a car with Miss Sophia Dobson, and the shooting of seven Mexicans "because they tried to hog the sidewalks."

Members of Varecha's family assisted police, psychiatrists and representatives of the State's attorney's office in the questioning. It was only when his sister and her husband, Daniel Minski, said that Varecha possessed a pistol and was not at their home Wednesday night when Jordan was killed, as Varecha claimed, that he confessed.

"All right," he said. "If my sister says that, I'll talk."

Varecha then confessed, Alcock said, how he shot Jordan, former municipal court bailiff and widowed father of a 12-year-old boy, as he leaped from his parked automobile to defend his companion, Miss Emma Dahnke.

"Then I ran away," Varecha said, "and went for about seven blocks. I found the Henry girl there in a car with a man."

Miss Henry's escort, James Guisinger, was forced into the rumble seat at the point of a pistol and she was attacked.

"I drove Guisinger toward his home and let him off," Varecha said. "I kept the girl with me.

"And I shot seven Mexicans in the territory near my home," he added. "Two of them died, I think. They get filled up with that marijuana and push you off the sidewalk. It's awful out there.

"McElligott was just a tough Irishman, so I had to shoot him, too," Varecha said.

Alcock said the confessions resulted by the use of a technique which he termed the "fourth degree." Doctors and police appealed to Varecha's exaggerated criminal ego, he said, encouraged his boastings, and the confessions followed.

Assistant State's Attorney Walker Butler said the case would be given to the grand jury tomorrow and that indictments on charges of murder, assault to murder, robbery, attack and attempted attack would be sought.

Mountain Folk View Altar Robins Built as Yukon Sign

Whittier, N. C., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Whittier's mountain folk today looked upon a crude altar surmounted by a wooden cross, built by Col. Raymond Robins during his stay here, as the reflection of a light which many years ago pierced the shadow of the Yukon.

They have heard the story of how Col. Robins, then just reaching manhood, nearly lost his life and the fortune which he and two companions had taken from the frozen gravels of the Klondyke, and of his strange conversion.

The story passed around here is that Robins, seeing death imminent when his party was trapped by a howling blizzard, started alone for the "outside" and help. After days of fighting the ice and snow which rode the gale, his strength almost gone, he is said to have come to a lone and bare tree snag, and, while he looked, skies cleared, the sun came out, and caused the snag to cast a shadow like a cross upon the snow.

Robins is quoted as describing his sensation as "overwhelming" and he fell on his knees as the Arctic storm once more closed about him and in his prayer promised to devote his life to human service.

Revived, he said in recounting the experience, he outstripped death on that occasion and came home to work with the Red Cross and other humanitarian agencies.

And so, say the mountain folk, to whom religion is a concrete and ever-present state, when Robins resumed his search for gold during his period of aberration, the memory of the Yukon returned, and he worshiped once more alone and in the open air before a natural altar.

Chicago Attorneys Arrive for Insull

Magnate Must Decide Today Whether He Will Fight Action.

Athens, Greece, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Charles A. Bellows and Andrew J. Vlachos, assistant State's attorneys, of Cook County, Ill., arrived here today to seek either voluntary or compulsory removal of Samuel Insull, former utilities operator, to Chicago to face embezzlement and larceny charges.

Mr. Insull will have to decide tomorrow whether he will return voluntarily to the United States or will fight extradition proceedings when the two attorneys will urge him to choose the voluntary course. It was understood Mr. Insull will receive Mr. Vlachos personally, but will refer him to his lawyers.

The former financier has retained several lawyers here, indicating he will refuse to return except under protest. The Illinois attorneys declined to make a statement until they had visited the American legation and interviewed the American minister, which they plan to do tomorrow.

INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT GAINS SINCE AUGUST

Reserve Board Reports Big Advance in Leather and Textiles.

(Associated Press.)

Industrial production, including both manufactures and mining, was 10 per cent larger in September than in August.

The Federal Reserve Board so reported yesterday in its final review for September, adding that sharp increases in physical output in the recent months had been largely concentrated in the textile and leather industries, but in September included meat-packing products, steel and coal.

Reviewing the business slump, the board said:

"In the period of reduced activity the output of durable goods has fallen much more rapidly than the output of goods in the lighter industries. This happened in 1920-21, in 1924 and in 1927, and has been especially pronounced in the present depression.

"From the high point of 1929, manufacturing output as a whole has fallen about one-half. The output of durable goods, however, has fallen by about three-fourths, while in other industries the decline, except for a few months in the past summer, has been less than one-fourth."

The board said that in October there was a further increase in member bank reserve balances reflecting an addition of about $70,000,000 to the country's monetary gold, a $120,000,000 return of currency from circulation and $30,000,000 additional issues of national bank notes.

Deposits of reopened banks in October exceeded the deposits of those closed during the month, the board said. There were 24 banks with deposits of $31,028,000 that reopened in October, while 97 banks with deposits of $31,899,000 suspended operations.

Navy of Nebraska On Election Shoal

Metcalfe's Successor Balks at Giving Orders to Omaha "Admirals."

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The "great navy of the State of Nebraska" will remain afloat in spite of the Democratic landslide, but the new administration won't be responsible.

In a State where creeks run dry in summer and none of the rivers can boast a navigable channel, Lieut. Gov. T. W. Metcalfe of Omaha organized a "navy" about two years ago during the absence of Gov. Charles W. Bryan. With engraved commissions and fancy seals he created "admirals" right and left.

Then Metcalfe lost in the election and W. H. Jurgensen, of Lincoln, his successor, loomed as the next in command.

Today Jurgensen decided against the "navy." He wrote Metcalfe: "It is not my intention to interfere in any way with this most militant organization. It is my wish that you remain in full and complete control."

One Killed, One Hurt In Crash of Airplane

Lawton, Okla., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—George Cease, 19, of Lawton, was killed and Henry Stannard, 22, licensed pilot, was injured critically today by the crash of Stannard's plane about 5 miles southwest of here.

Farmers who saw the crash said the plane went into a spin at a height of about 300 feet.

Miami Stroke Is Fatal To Ohio Resort Editor

Miami, Fla., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Alfred W. Fritz, 78, veteran editor of the Euclid Beach News, Cleveland, Ohio, died here last night after collapsing in a store where he had gone to make purchases earlier in the day.

The body will be sent to Utica, N. Y., for interment.

ROBINS STILL FAILS TO RECOGNIZE WIFE

Dry Crusader Is Moved to Sanitarium for Work to Restore Memory.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—For the second time in as many days, Col. Raymond Robins, famous dry crusader, peered at his wife out of blank eyes today and apparently failed to recognize her.

Not a glimmer of recognition followed Mrs. Robins' second visit to a hospital where her husband, stricken with amnesia, is seeking to recover his memory under the care of specialists, said Mrs. Robins.

His face covered with a shaggy beard and wearing dirty overalls and heavy boots, Col. Robins was found Friday at Whittier, a small village almost hidden away in the Great Smoky Mountains of western North Carolina.

He had been at Whittier virtually ever since his sensational disappearance on September 3 when he suddenly dropped out of sight after starting to keep an engagement with President Hoover.

Today's meeting between Robins and his wife was at Appalachian Hall, a sanitarium to which he was transferred from Norburn Hospital this morning. Dr. M. A. Griffin, physician in charge of the case, is chief physician at Appalachian Hall.

Mrs. Robins, who raced here by train and motor from Florida upon learning that her husband had been found, smiled bravely when she left the sanitarium after a 15-minute visit with her husband.

Robins Appears Well.

Aside from Robins' inability to recognize her and remember events transpiring before he reached Whittier, Mrs. Robins said he appears well and healthy in every way.

"We had a pleasant, friendly chat, but he did not recognize me," she said.

"The colonel seems to have benefited from the rest he has been able to receive because of his being protected from unwelcome visitors.

"We spoke together only a few moments, but one could see that, aside from his inability to recall events beyond the time he reached Whittier, he is well and healthy in every way," she said.

Dr. Griffin, who is in complete charge of the case, recommended the transfer to Appalachian Hall he said, because of the greater opportunity for activity Robins will have there.

Appalachian Hall is surrounded by spacious grounds in which patients who are well enough may stroll or sit. It has specialized for many years in treatment of mental disorder.

As yet Dr. Griffin has not been able to give members of the philanthropist's family any hope that he will regain his lost memory at an early date.

Usually Is Temporary.

John Dreier, of New York, a nephew, who identified Robins at Whittier, said Dr. Griffin has refused to make any prediction with respect to Robins' recovery.

In his only public statement, the psychiatrist explained it will be several days before he would attempt to diagnose the mental abberration from which Col. Robins is suffering.

"By amnesia is meant that state of mind characterized by loss of memory for the experiences of a period of time. This condition is seen especially in so-called 'fuge' in which for example, a man leaves home suddenly and without warning disappears. After a period of time, varying from a few hours to months, or even years, he comes to himself more or less abruptly with a complete loss of memory (amnesia) for what has happened during his absence.

"In this 'absence' he may appear dazed or confused and do nothing, but wander aimlessly. On the other hand, he may lead an apparently normal life, adopt a new name, earn his own living, travel and mix with people without arousing suspicion that anything is wrong.

"This condition may be a symptom of organic brain damage, but more commonly is an expression of functional disorder and yields favorably to therapy when the underlying factor precipitating it is uncovered."

Continues to Deny Identity.

Since his identification by Dreier and Federal agents, acting on a tip supplied by a 13-year-old Whittier boy, who noted a resemblance between the man who took him hiking on Sunday afternoon and a picture of the missing social worker he saw in a newspaper, Col. Robins has stoutly denied that he is anyone but "Reynolds Rogers," prospector, from "out Kentucky way."

Persons who saw the meeting between Robins and Dreier say that the 50-year-old crusader told his nephew he was not Raymond Robins.

Dreier said today Robins regards the interruption of the quiet, carefree life in the open he was living at Whittier as an error on the part of the Robins family.

"He feels," Dreier added, "that we have made a tragic mistake in identification.

"However, he has resigned himself to the situation, believing apparently that he may soon convince his physicians and Mrs. Robins that he is not Col. Robins, and be free to again take up the peaceful life at Whittier he learned to love so well."

Friend Expecting Robins' Statement

Mineral Discovery Hinted as Subject He Is Due to Talk on Today.

Whittier, N. C., Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Important information is forthcoming tomorrow from Col. Raymond Robins, T. K. Hyatt, his close friend, said tonight. Hyatt, who said that Robins before leaving yesterday for Asheville told him he had made an "important mineral discovery," said today he had received word from Robins calling him to Appalachian Hall, in Asheville, for some important information.

A crowd of people came in to Whittier today to view the boarding house, where Robins had lived for six weeks and to see modest, 13-year-old Carl Fisher, responsible for discovering Col. Robins.

Fisher, a student in the seventh grade and son of a mountaineer who keeps a general store here, had little to say about a trip he made recently to Battle Cove Knob, one of the highest mountains in this vicinity, with Col. Robins. He said that Robins pointed out various trees and shrubs and told him their names.

Scientist Exiles Self Year In Arctic to Dig Up Relics

Youthful Smithsonian Archeologist Uncovers Priceless Finds, Including Skulls and Skeletons, After Long Wait for Sun to Reappear.

(Associated Press.)

The winner of one of the strangest races ever staged—a race between science and the inexorable cold of the Arctic—has just returned to civilization.

He is James A. Ford, youthful archeologist of the Smithsonian Institution, and to win the race he met an unusual entry requirement—a year's exile at the northernmost point under the American flag.

The prize which Ford brought with him is a collection of relics of a lost Eskimo civilization that are priceless to science for the story they tell of ancient man in the Far North. To win them he waited through almost a year of Arctic winter for a chance to dig in the soil of Point Barrow, Alaska, during the three summer months when it is not frozen solid.

From this frozen soil, carefully scraped away as fast as it thawed, at the rate of an inch or so a day, he recovered weapons, tools, utensils that had been held in the Arctic's perpetual cold storage for perhaps 1,000 years or more. They are believed to have been fashioned by an ancient race of Eskimos with a skill that perished long ago.

The Arctic fought hard to guard its secrets. From the time when Ford first started for Point Barrow the cold of the North seemed to try to hamper his quest.

Sea ice in the Arctic Ocean prevents ships from reaching Point Barrow at all except for a brief period in the summer. In the summer of 1931, when Ford was on his way, the ice was worse than usual, and Ford's ship did not arrive until August 15.

That gave him only two or three weeks before the last ship left again for the season, too little time for the digging he wanted to do. The Arctic seemed to be winning the race.

Ford decided on a bold stroke. He would spend the winter at Point Barrow and be on hand the next spring to start digging as soon as the ground began to thaw. He abandoned plans for a year of study at the University of Mississippi and radioed to the Smithsonian Institution from the Point Barrow Army station for permission to stay. It was granted.

Ford settled down to wait through the long darkness of the Arctic winter, with the few white people at the radio station, the mission and the trading post for company. The sun went down November 15 and did not reappear until the middle of January. He spent the twilight months studying the Eskimo tribes in the neighborhood, hunting, sealing and exploring the country by dog sled.

When the ground began to thaw on May 27, however, Ford made up for lost time. He and his Eskimo helpers often worked eighteen hours a day at their digging, scraping away layers of thawed soil, so that the frozen soil below would be exposed to the sun and thaw faster.

When the two months of perpetual daylight arrived in midsummer it was difficult to sleep, and Ford sometimes worked two and three days at a stretch without sleep. It was a race to do as much digging as possible before the return of winter and the departure of the last ship.

Ford's reward was more than 60 packing cases full of relics that trace the history of the Eskimos at Point Barrow back for nobody knows how many centuries, and skulls and skeletons of about 50 individuals covering a similar period of time.

He caught the last ship for civilization, just before the ice again began closing in. He is the first archeologist ever to conduct systematic work at Point Barrow.

VERDICT IS SUICIDE IN STUDENT DEATH

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—A verdict of suicide was given today by Dr. M. M. Scarborough, medical examiner, in the death of Henry Lee Krichbaum, 19-year-old Yale sophomore of Novelty, Ohio, whose body was found on the shore of Long Island Sound at Lighthouse Point. Despondency over financial matters was advanced by police as the probable motive for the act.

The youth, a self-supporting student, shot himself through the right temple with a new .22-caliber rifle. His body was found by three men who were hiking along the shore at 9 o'clock last night. Krichbaum drove to Lighthouse Point in a hired automobile. The car was found about 200 yards from the body.

Police expressed the opinion that the student purchased the rifle shortly before his suicide. New wrapping paper was found in the automobile. A yellow string, to which presumably had been attached the price tag, was still on the rifle.

The office of Dr. Scarborough said Krichbaum had hoped to get a job with a clothes cleaning and pressing establishment, to help pay his way through college. He failed to get the job, however, and since then had been in poor spirits.

Ingrid-George Betrothal Announcement Now Expected on Saturday by Sweden

Stockholm Undaunted by Previous Failure to "Call the Turn."

Stockholm, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Undaunted by a disillusionment earlier this month when the stage supposedly was all set for the event, newspapers here have decided a royal gathering this coming Saturday is the appropriate time for an announcement of the engagement of Prince George of England and Princess Ingrid of Sweden.

Even if the oft-rumored engagement again fails to materialize, Sweden will have enough to occupy its interest in welcoming home two young honeymooners who may some day reign as king and queen—Prince Gustaf Adolf, eldest son of the crown prince, and his bride of a month, the slim and blonde Princess Sibylle of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

They are expected Friday morning, November 25, and the new rumor going the rounds is that the engagement of Ingrid, Sibylle's sister-in-law, and Prince George, may be announced at the welcoming dinner at the royal castle on Saturday evening.

The matchmakers were disappointed when they anticipated an announcement of the engagement on November 11, when the fiftieth birthday of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf was celebrated.

To give strength to the new rumor is the fact that there has been no official denial that the announcement will be forthcoming. The princess herself has shown no inclination to cry it down and her recent visit to London added fuel to the fire.

The growing conviction that the Prince of Wales really is determined to remain a bachelor has ended the linking of his name with that of Ingrid. The fact that his younger brother accompanied him recently to Sweden and that he has seen a lot of Ingrid lately, on her frequent trips to London, has made Prince George the favorite.

Public and private receptions are planned for three days beginning with the arrival of the royal newlyweds, Prince Gustaf Adolf and Princess Sibylle.

At the railroad station the 24-year-old princess will be greeted by King Gustaf, who was not present at the wedding at Coburg, and by the governor of Stockholm and other high officials. A long procession through the streets of Stockholm will then start, with the newlyweds riding in an open carriage drawn by four spic-and-span horses from the king's stable.

With a mounted detachment of the king's guard leading the way, the German princess will be given opportunity to greet the people of her new country on the way to the royal castle. Business in Stockholm will come to a standstill and schools will close.

At the castle the royal pair will be welcomed by the lord high steward and conducted to a family reception. Friday evening there will be a family dinner, followed by special church services.

Saturday evening 1,200 invited guests will assemble in the famous "White Hall" in the castle for a welcoming dinner. A special operatic program Sunday evening at the royal theater will conclude the festivities, after which the royal couple will turn to their newly completed home in the suburbs of Stockholm.

London, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Talk of the betrothal of Princess Ingrid and Prince George has persisted in London.

There is some shaking of heads hereabouts because of the consanguinity of the 22-year-old Swedish princess and the 29-year-old British prince. They had a joint great-grandmother in Queen Victoria and Britishers do not like unions between cousins, even though, as in this case, the relationship is of the third degree.

Aside from this, however, Ingrid would be welcomed in England. She is unusually pretty and is lively.

Her skill as a rider would fit well with high British society pastimes. Then, too, she is a good skater and she can ride skis down snow-covered slopes with grace and daring.

Furthermore, she has had what is called here a "sensible" education. She took a course in home economics and really can cook.

All told, she is considered highly eligible for any royal family. So much so, in fact, that earlier gossip had her name linked with that of the Prince of Wales, and Britain would not have been surprised if she had been presented to the country as its future queen.

Married to Prince George, there would be only a remote possibility of such an event. Besides Wales, George has two older brothers, and the Duke of York is the father of two small princesses.

So instead of becoming queen, it is likely that she would be at most princess and duchess. That is, if reports of coming birthday honors to George prove true. He will be 30 years old December 20 and it has been hinted that on that day he will be given one of the three vacant royal dukedoms, Edinburgh, Kent or Sussex.

His brothers each have that title now. The Prince of Wales is Duke of Cornwall and Duke of Rothesay. Then come Prince Albert Frederick, Duke of York, and Prince Henry William, Duke of Gloucester. King George derives revenue from the duchy of Lancaster and the aged Prince Arthur, grandfather of Ingrid, is Duke of Connaught.

Despite Family Tie, Third Cousin of Prince Would Please Britain.

HAWAII TO CONTEST CURB OF AUTONOMY

Delegation Will Come Here to Block 'Revolutionary' Change Proposed.

Honolulu, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Stating he believed Hawaii's territorial status was threatened by legislation pending in Congress, Gov. Lawrence M. Judd announced today a commission of island leaders would go to Washington to present Hawaii's case when hearings on bills proposed to curb home rule begin in January.

Besides Gov. Judd, who will act as ex-officio chairman, the commissioners are Wallace R. Farrington, former Gov. James L. Coke, Democratic national committeeman and former Supreme Court Justice, who has been prominently mentioned as a possible choice for the new Democratic governor; John H. Wilson, former mayor of Honolulu, and A. G. M. Robertson, former Supreme Court Justice.

Entitled to Rights.

Pointing out in a statement Hawaii became part of the United States with the understanding it would receive rights and privileges accorded other United States territories, Gov. Judd said the pending legislation would "deny the islands the rights which they have cherished deeply ever since annexation."

The legislation to which he referred includes a bill by Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, requesting the Department of Justice to increase Washington's voice in local Hawaiian government; the bill of Representative Britten, of Illinois, to establish military government in Hawaii, and the Williams' bill, introduced by the chairman of the House territories committee, providing for commission rule.

Most of the changes proposed, Gov. Judd said, are "revolutionary."

"They strike at the foundation of Hawaii's self-government. They are contrary to the American principles that always governed the relations of the Federal Government with the Territory of Hawaii."

Enforcement Reorganized.

Only indirectly did the governor's statement refer to the unrest of last winter following the Ala Moana assault case and the Massie trial, which were factors in causing a Department of Justice investigation of crime conditions in Hawaii.

Governor Judd pointed out that corrective measures have already been taken by the citizens of Hawaii.

"Law enforcement in the Territory, at which the Federal investigation was particularly directed, has been completely reorganized and established on a new high standard, comparable to that of the most modern systems of the country," he said. "The Territory of Hawaii has emerged from the difficult situation in a stronger position than ever before, and it is fully capable of the highest expectations of its own people and the Federal Government.

"The people of Hawaii do not believe there can be any justification in denying them continuation of all the rights of an American Territory, the fullest measure of self-government."

A. F. OF L. BODY ASKS JOBLESS INSURANCE

Federation to Recommend That Industry Bear Entire Cost.

Cincinnati, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—For the first time in the history of the American Federation of Labor, its executive council tonight announced it will recommend Nation-wide compulsory unemployment insurance, the cost to be supported by industry alone.

At the same time the council reported "indications are that favorable action providing for a modification of the Volstead act" to permit beer "will be taken at the short session of Congress, which meets December 5."

The unemployment insurance recommendation and the beer report were contained in the council's report prepared for presentation at opening of the federation's annual convention tomorrow.

"The council," the report said, "would much prefer that working people be privileged to work and be accorded job security than to see them accept relief because of unemployment."

"But," it added, "the facts are that the management of industry has not provided work security or created work opportunities for those who are able, willing and eager to work."

Hence, it held, "industry must be compelled to do what it has thus far failed to do. Work or relief must be provided."

It suggested enactment of a compulsory unemployment insurance plan in each State. The project would be administered by a State commission, and the council proposed that funds for its operation be drawn from employers, in contributions of not less than 3 per cent of the total pay roll of the individual employer, which would be invested in Federal securities.

The council said the plan would not deny benefits of unemployment insurance to those out of work because of a trade dispute; unable to obtain work except under conditions less favorable than those prevailing locally, or if nonmembership in a labor union was made a condition of employment.

GOV. JUDD DEFENDS HAWAII HOME RULE

to the people whom they are sent to serve nor to the source of authority in Washington, once the appointment is made."

Saying "exigencies of military control have been brought into the discussion," Judd continued:

"No one in the United States better understands or appreciates the value of Hawaii as a defensive outpost than the citizens residing in Hawaii. That it is continually on their minds is evidenced by the frequency with which it appears in conversation, the public utterances and the written documents of old and young. * * * In every test of military stress the people of Hawaii have proved their loyalty to the United States."

Judd made no mention of the pardons he granted to Mrs. Granville Fortescue, mother of Mrs. Massie, and to Lieut. Thomas H. Massie and two Navy enlisted men after they had served one hour of a ten-year sentence for slaying Joseph Kahahawai, the native alleged to have assaulted Mrs. Massie.

Although Seth W. Richardson, Assistant Attorney General, made a special investigation and "returned a favorable report on crime conditions in the territory," Judd said, "a portion of the American Press and certain other agencies, intent upon furthering their own peculiar purposes, have persisted in their attempts to fan the flame of ignorance and hatred for their own ulterior purposes, but fortunately the facts belie these attacks and a remarkable change in mainland attitude toward the islands is most apparent."

"Whereas Honolulu has been specifically found by Mr. Richardson to compare very favorably with communities of similar size on the mainland, it should now be possible, with the splendid machinery provided by the recent special sessions of the (Hawaiian) legislature, to make Honolulu not merely favorably comparable to other communities, but in fact an exemplary community," Judd said.

Take 1 or 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.
Drink Full Glass of Water.
If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of warm water and gargle according to directions.

Almost Instant Relief In This Way

If you have a cold—don't take chances with "cold killers" and nostrums. A cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

That is because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin and drinking plenty of water every 2 to 4 hours the first day and 3 or 4 times daily thereafter. If throat is sore, gargle with 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets crushed and dissolved in a half glass of warm water, repeating every 2 or 3 hours as necessary. Sore throat eases this way in a few minutes, incredible as this may seem.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets dissolve with sufficient speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness. Get a box of 12 or bottle of 100 at any drug store.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

Dr. Sheehy Talks On Catholic Hour

Guest Preacher Is Assisted by Rev. S. A. Czyz and Rev. J. K. Reese.

Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, was guest preacher on the Washington Catholic radio hour broadcast yesterday from the Church of the Immaculate Conception over station WOL.

The Rev. Francis J. Hurney, pastor of the church and director of the radio services, presided. He was assisted by the Rev. S. A. Czyz and the Rev. J. Kelly Reese.

The blessing of the sick and the solemn Lourdes procession took place in Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes. The music of the service, under direction of Harry Wheaton Howard, included Florence Yocum, soprano, Fred Nolan, barytone, Ann Arlen, violinist and the boys' sanctuary choir.

A solemn high Mass in honor of the Feast of the Presentation will be sung today at 12:15 p. m. in the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Father Hurney will be celebrant.

Brown Club Plans For Wider Activity

One of Aims in Program Is for Closer Contact With University.

Plans for reorganization of the Brown University Club of Washington, giving it wider activity and scope, were announced last night by Dr. Edwin G. Dexter, its president.

Dr. Dexter said that new functions of the club will enable alumni in the District, of whom there are more than 100, to maintain closer contact with Brown University, to encourage preparatory school students of high quality to enter the university and to entertain undergraduate organizations when they visit Washington.

Dr. Dexter announced the following officers and committees to serve for 1932-33: Elijah Anthony, vice president; J. C. Weedon, secretary-treasurer; Rex Cleveland, chairman executive committee; Everett T. Martin, membership; Robert H. McNally, program; Warren Frances, publicity, and Harold Mistr, subfreshman.

Dr. Barber Is Guest Of Mu-So-Lit Club

Colored Body Here Honors Democratic Leader of Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. Max Barber, of Philadelphia, chairman of the Allied Roosevelt Clubs of Pennsylvania and president of the National John Brown Memorial Association, was guest of honor at the Saturday meeting of the Mu-So-Lit Club, composed of leading colored citizens of Washington.

The Sunday Forum of the club yesterday afternoon was addressed by Dean Kelly Miller, of Howard University, director of the colored divisions of the Community Chest. A. Langdon Taylor conducted the forum.

Announcement was made of plans for the annual Thanksgiving reception of the club Friday night at the club headquarters, 1327 R street northwest. Many out-of-town visitors to the Lincoln-Howard football game are expected to be guests of the club.

Chicago Lawyer Group To Analyze Legislation

Chicago, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—A group of Chicago attorneys tonight announced completion of plans for a national organization of lawyers to study and interpret all State and national legislation before it is made into law.

A charter has been requested for the organization, to be known as the Lewyers Legislative League of America, under Illinois laws, and W. W. O'Brien, of Chicago, has been named president. Other officers are William B. Henry, vice president, and T. J. McCormick, secretary.

All-India Conference Rejects Vote Reforms

New Delhi, India, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—A joint meeting of the all-India Moslem conference and the Moslem league today summarily rejected proposals adopted at a Hindu-Moslem conference at Allahabad last Friday for settlement of communal representation in proposed electoral reforms.

The Indian round-table conference, now in session in London, received a cable last week from Pandit Malaviya, Hindu champion of the Untouchables, stating that a final settlement had been reached between Moslem and Hindu factions, but that it was premised on the granting of home rule to India.

Walker Visits Riviera; Studies Memoir Offer

Villefranche, France, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Former Mayor James J. Walker of New York City landed at this Riviera resort today from the steamship Comte Grande. Asked whether he intended to remain for a while, Mr. Walker said, "I haven't made up my mind, but you will find out in a couple of days."

It was learned he had telephoned Paris before making a decision and was likely to choose a village in the foothills of the Alps for his residence if he stayed. Unconfirmed reports were that he received a $50,000 offer for his memoirs from an American magazine, and may write them here.

Pittsburgh Host Today To Catholic Conference

Pittsburgh, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Discussion of unemployment and what Catholic action can do to relieve it will occupy a large part of the twelfth annual conference of the National Council of Catholic Men, which opens tomorrow. Additional subjects to be taken up include crime and other social problems and Catholic education and the Catholic press.

Speakers will include Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of Pittsburgh; Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of Pittsburgh; the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, of the Catholic University of America, Washington; Bernard J. Rothwell, of Boston, and Dr. Thomas E. Purcell, of Kansas City.

Rejected Suitor Shoots Girl, 16

New York Museum Guard Then Kills Self; Pair Had Quarreled.

New York, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Joseph Lounsberry, 31, a guard at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, shot and critically wounded Anna Dunn, 16, neice of his stepfather, and then shot and killed himself today after quarreling with the girl because she had repulsed his attentions.

Several taxicab drivers witnessed the shooting which occurred in the ground floor hallway of the building in which Miss Dunn resides. Today's quarrel was a sequel to the argument, police said, the couple engaged in last night at the home of Miss Dunn's uncle.

An undirected note found in one of Lounsberry's pockets read:

"I know you will think I am crazy, but I am not. I am in my right mind and I know why I am doing this. It is for the best. I can't stand the thought of losing Anna. I love her. I can't give her up, so I am taking her with me. Joe."

Husband to Go With Winner Of Post Contest on Sea Trip

Mr. and Mrs. James K. Berryman Are Thrilled at Prospect of European Visit; Woman's Desire to Write Fanned by Success in Competition.

Aladdin's lamp couldn't have brought greater prospect of pleasure in store than announcement of the winning award in The Post's "One Way Passage" contest did to Mr. and Mrs. James K. Berryman, of 1841 Columbia road northwest.

Mrs. Louise Berryman was the author of the best interpretation of the climax of the photoplay in which Kay Francis and William Powell were the starring players.

Interviewed by a Post reporter last night, Mrs. Berryman quickly indicated that her husband would be the traveling companion she will designate for the trip to Europe.

Mrs. Berryman last night said she was still pinching herself to see if she was in the grip of reality.

The Berrymans declared last night that they were inveterate readers of The Post and that it had been since childhood their favorite morning newspaper. Not only did they enjoy the clear presentation of news in The Post, they said, but the editorial concepts of this paper generally reflected their views.

Mr. Berryman, who answers to the good old American name of "Jim," was just about as delightedly upset about the result of the contest as was his wife. He puffed strenuously at a briar pipe as his wife was interviewed, interjecting occasional remarks of a nature not uncomplimentary to Mrs. Berryman.

A recent graduate of George Washington University, Mrs. Berryman has always cherished a desire to write, she said last night, and the picking of her poignantly clear idea of the ending of "One Way Passage" has fanned those flames, she admitted.

"Saturday The Post asked me to pose for a picture," said Mrs. Berryman, "and this indicated I might have a chance. From then on I was in a state of excitement.

"Sleep was practically impossible Saturday night. Early Sunday morning I tiptoed to the front door of our apartment. A paper was there, but not The Post. Finally I went back to bed. Then I heard the thud of a paper being delivered.

"Rushing to the door, I picked up The Post and saw my picture on the front page. I was so delighted I didn't know what to do. All night it had been like the subdued expectations one experienced on childish Christmases, and this seemed like a most wonderful Christmas come true."

Blonde and blue-eyed, Mrs. Berryman is decidedly attractive. The young couple have been married six years.

January is the time Mr. and Mrs. Berryman pick for their trip. Paris and London and the surrounding countrysides of the two great foreign capitals are the objectives they yearn to explore.

Atmosphere for future stories will be sought by Mrs. Berryman as the young couple enjoy their European trip, while Mr. Berryman, son of a prominent cartoonist and artist and himself a promising creator of sketches, will find much material to store up for use.

Mrs. Berryman is a native of Washington. She attended Western High School and George Washington University. A member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority, Mrs. Berryman played the part of an English aviatrix in the George Washington Troubadours' show last spring.

An interpretation of the ending of "One Way Passage" was also submitted by Mr. Berryman. The trip is sponsored by The Post, the French Line, the Warner Bros. Theaters, the Edison Hotel and Eastern Air Transport.

$1,240,221 LACKING, WORKERS OF CHEST RENEW EFFORTS

Chest, will head the list of distinguished women who are to be honor guests at today's meeting. This list includes Mrs. Nicholas F. Brady, chairman of the executive board of the National Girl Scout Association, and Mrs. Hoover's representative on the national citizens committee on welfare and relief mobilization, headed by Newton D. Baker; Mrs. Ogden Mills, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Frederick Brooke, social and philanthropic leader; Mrs. B. F. Cheatham, District commissioner of the Girl Scouts; and Mrs. Gerritt I. Miller, former district commissioner of the Girl Scouts. Mrs. Hoover is honorary president of the national organization of Girl Scouts.

H. L. Rust, jr., chairman of the Metropolitan Unit, yesterday issued a personal letter to every worker in his unit, urging that the utmost effort to obtain every possible dollar be made before today's meeting. Mr. Rust pointed out that the Metropolitan Unit and the Group Solicitation Unit are in a close race and that while the Metropolitan Unit has collected slightly more money than its rival, the latter is ahead in the percentage of quota obtained. In his letter, Mr. Rust again pointed out that on the face of present reports, the destitute of Washington will be without care for 187 days next year. He urged redoubled efforts on the part of every worker.

Lloyd B. Wilson, chairman of the Group Solicitation Unit, congratulated his workers on their advantage in the percentage of quota received to date over that of the Metropolitan Unit, but warned that the utmost effots will be needed if they are to retain this slight advantage. He asked that each keyman make a definite effort to do a whole day's work this forenoon, so that an adequate report from this unit would be made at today's meeting.

"In spite of the present outlook, I can not believe that Washingtonians will close their ears to the plea of their suffering and destitute fellow citizens," E. C. Graham, president of the Community Chest, said last night. "The need is so definite; so great; so perfectly obvious to every one who has the slightest bit of consideration for his fellow men, that I feel sure that an aroused Washington will come to the front in the next three days as it did in war time and help us to reach our goal, which every one knows is the carefully figured minimum upon which the Chest's 63 agencies of mercy can operate next year."

A little girl in a green Girl Scout uniform rang the bell of Director Elwood Street's home last night and said she wanted to present to the Community Chest $5 from Troop 78, Girl Scouts of America. It developed that the Scout was Jean Willett, daughter of Herbert L. Willett, jr., assistant director of the Community Chest, and that Sarah and Sibyl Street, twin daughters of the director, are also members of the troop. The $5 consisted of a $1 bill, eight quarters and a collection of nickels and dimes which had evidently been taken directly from the tin box which serves as the troop's treasury.

Speaking last night over Station WJSV, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, made a fervent plea to the people of Washington not to forget their suffering brothers and sisters in this time of dire need.

Dr. Clinchy pointed out that never in the history of the Capital has the city been faced with the situation confronting it at present. He said that the potential need is greater than ever before and drew a touching word picture of conditions that might prevail were the Chest to fail from any cause to reach its goal. Appealing to the Christian and civic duty of every Washingtonian, the speaker declared that it would be unthinkable if Washington were to fail its own in the present crisis.

Today's report meeting will be held, as usual, in the large ballroom of the Willard Hotel at 12:15 o'clock sharp.

PROFESSOR SCORES HUMANITARIANISM

Rev. G. F. Strohaver Raps H. G. Wells at Knights of Columbus Dinner.

An attack on humanitarianism and the presentation of evidence by a scientist that God exists climaxed a Fourth Degree Assembly dinner of the Knights of Columbus last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

The Rev. George F. Strohaver, professor of chemistry at Georgetown University and a leading Jesuit chemist, who delivered the attack, declared that protestantism is dying because of this new doctrine.

"Protestants are faced by two problems," he said, "one is to accept this new doctrine of humanitarianism or that of Christianity, which is Catholicism. Humanitarianism offers the kingdom of man, Christianity the kingdom of God."

Father Strohaver asserted that humanitarianism is synonymous with atheism because it presents God as a power controlled by evolution, and suggests that man is the supreme power. He took to task H. G. Wells, whom he described as the cleverest and greatest exponent of humanitarianism.

Describing simple facts of the universe, such as air, water and coal, the chemistry professor pointed out that their very creation is proof that there is an unseen architect and that the earth was designed for a purpose.

Father Strohaver's address was the fetaure of the assembly which was the second George Washington Bicentennial banquet of the fourth degree of the Knights of Columbus in Washington. It followed the conferring of the fourth degree on a large class of initiates from the Maryland-District of Columbia jurisdiction.

Addresses also were made by the Rev. Coleman Nevils, president of the Georgetown University; Judge Charles E. Moylan, of the appeal tax court of Baltimore, the only Protestant at the dinner; Arthur B. J. Williamson, master of the fourth degree in the local jurisdiction; John Bowen, one of the initiates, and Leo D. Ward, State deputy of the Knights of Columbus in Maryland. William E. Leahy, Washington lawyer, was toastmaster.

Detroit Slaying Of 2 Is Mystery

Apartment Shows Signs of Struggle; Brother of Victim Quizzed.

Detroit, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Max Heizelbatz, 31, of Columbus, Ohio, and Bruno Scheible, 31, were shot to death today in the apartment where Scheible lived. The apartment showed indications of a terrific struggle.

Martin Scheible, brother of Bruno, who spent the night in the apartment, said he heard no struggle although there was blood on the walls of the kitchen, where Heizelbatz's body was found, and several pieces of furniture were broken.

Martin Scheible said he was "half asleep" on a Davenport bed in the living room when he heard one shot. Then, he said, "Bruno staggered in from the kitchen and fell over my bed. He had blood all over him. I ran into the kitchen and found Heizelbatz lying on the floor. That's all I know." Bruno Scheible and Heizelbatz each had been shot once, Heizelbatz through the temple and Scheible through the heart. A pistol was found beneath Heizelbatz body. It had only one empty shell.

"MODEL BOY" IS SAID TO CONFESS MURDER

seen, "Bert" was driving the car. The machine had been shoved off the road into underbrush.

Search for the missing youth was intensified in this section when a hotelkeeper, Frank H. Gibbs, notified the sheriff's office that a boy meeting Arnold's description stayed at his hotel last night.

Posses were organized hurriedly and deputies spread over Carroll and Joe Daviess Counties in efforts to prevent the fugitive from crossing into Iowa.

Shortly after the abandoned car was found, Sheriff Harry Shiley was told the boy was seen walking toward Stockton. The youth was arrested in a restaurant there and brought back here for questioning.

After his confession, authorities said, he was asked why he had slain Mrs. Sake.

"Yes, why?" was his answer, they reported. He asked how long he would "get in jail" for doing it, officers said.

The Chicago authorities arrived about 10 o'clock to take him back to that city.

Frederic Burton Shipp Dies After Operation

Chicago, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Stricken while attending a religious meeting, Frederic Burton Shipp, 64, of Pittsburgh, a Y. M. C. A. leader, died in a hospital today.

He underwent an emergency operation Wednesday after becoming ill at a meeting of a committee of the general council of the Presbyterian Church, of which he was chairman. Surviving are his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Harold D. Krafft, of Washington, and a son, Harold H. Shipp, of Pittsburgh.

REMOVAL OF TRACKS TO BE BEGUN TODAY

May Awards Contract After Demand of Alexandria City Council.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va,
Phone Alexandria 523.

The work of removing rails, cross ties and other physical equipment of the Mount Vernon, Alexandria & Washington Electric Railway, operation of which was abandoned on April 9 of this year, will be started this morning, in accordance with the demand of the city council of Alexandria as expressed at a recent meeting.

The charter, granted to the company in 1893, provided that in the event operation of the road should be abandoned the tracks should be removed and the streets restored to a condition corresponding to that of the streets at the time of the removal of the tracks, this removal of tracks and restoration of streets to be started within six months after operation of the road was abandoned.

This six months' period expired on October 1, and the city council immediately made demands upon Robert L. May, the present owner of the road, that the tracks be removed. No action was taken by Mr. May to comply with this demand, and at a recent meeting of the city council it was decided to allow Mr. May ten days in which to begin the removal operation. It has been announced by Mr. May, through his attorney, that a contract for the removal of the tracks and the restoration of the streets has been awarded to Delashmut Brothers, of Arlington County.

The work will start at the west end of Cameron street, which is considered to be in very bad condition, will move east on Cameron street to Columbus, thence south to King street and thence east on King street. It is understood the work of removing all of the tracks will not be undertaken at this time, since to do so would not in any way improve the streets, which are now in excellent condition.

John Barton Payne, national chairman of the American Red Cross, will deliver an address on Tuesday, November 29, at 3:30 p. m., in Prayer Hall, at the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia, west of Alexandria. He will give an outline of the work of the Red Cross.

A meeting of the vestry and congregation of Christ Protestant Episcopal Church will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the church to map plans for the every-member campaign, to start December 27.

The police school being conducted by Capt. John S. Arnold will meet on Wednesday night in room No. 1 of the Alexandria High School. The school is being attended by approximately 45 policemen of this city and nearby territory, and all persons interetsed in police work are invited.

Mrs. Wallace Lawrence, chairman of the Alexandria committee of the Virginia Tuberculosis Association, has announced that the annual sale of Christmas seals will be begun in this city Thanksgiving Day. Robert M. Reese, 517 Cameron street, is the local treasurer.

Practically all automobile owners in the city have complied with the State law in having their cars inspected, a few stragglers still coming into the stations. The authorized agents have been working day and night, with extra mechanics employed, for the past week to conclude the required inspections. Drivers of cars not carrying the red seal showing their cars have been examined are subject to a fine.

60 ARRESTS MADE IN AUTO TEST DRIVE

Cases Not to Be Pressed in Arlington if Action Is Taken This Week.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Failure to comply with State motor laws requiring all cars to be tested for brakes, lights and steering has resulted in approximately 60 arrests in the last two days, State Policeman C. Wayne Carr announced last night.

He stated that these motorists have been given until Saturday to have their cars tested. If this is done, the cases will not be pressed.

A strict check on all cars operated by residents of the county will be carried on by the State police, Carr says, until every car displays the required red seal.

Hot lunch service for the children of St. Charles Catholic School at Clarendon has been inaugurated by the Catholic Women's Club of Clarendon. A kitchen has been provided in the basement of the school building and lunches will be served by a committee from the club, headed by Mrs. J. Thomas Manning, chairman. The proceeds will be applied to the school fund.

The Lyon Park Citizens Association will meet tomorrow night in the Community House at 8 o'clock.

The Arlington County Parent-Teacher Association Council will hold its fall all-day meeting tomorrow, beginning at 9:30 a. m. in the auditorium of the Stonewall Jackson School at Ballston.

Among the speakers will be Mrs. A. C. Watkins, of the National Congress; Mrs. E. E. Carver, State historian, and Mrs. Hugh Reid.

ELIOT WADSWORTH GETS LEAGUE POST

Is First American Named to Loan Committee to Adjust Defaults.

New York, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Eliot Wadsworth, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, has been appointed to serve on the league loans committee of London, which is seeking to clear up defaulted foreign loans which had the sanction of the League of Nations, it was learned today.

Wadsworth is the first American to be named to the committee which is seeking to bring about full cooperation among all creditors of countries which received the moral support of the League of Nations in obtaining international loans.

Other new members on the committee are Dr. D. Crena de Iongh, of the Nederlandsche Handel Maatschappij, of Amsterdam and Dr. G. Bianchini, of the Associazione Technica Bancaria Italian, Milan.

The league loans committee is now studying conditions surrounding the default on several "league loans." These consist of the $25,000,000 Austrian government guaranteed loan of 1923-1943; the $17,000,000 Greek government 6 per cent stabilization and refugee loan of 1924, and $11,000,000 7 per cent refugee loan of 1928; the $13,000,000 Bulgarian 7½ per cent stabilization loan of 1928, and $4,500,000 7 per cent refugee loan of 1926; and the $7,500,000 Hungarian 7½ per cent reconstruction loan of 1924.

American bankers have indicated their willingness to cooperate with the London committee in working out the debt defaults. The Institute of International Finance, which is conducted by the Investment Bankers Association, jointly with New York University, has kept itself thoroughly posted on conditions in debtor countries. Through it and other organizations, bankers of this and foreign countries are pooling their information on foreign loans, and are seeking to protect the interests of investors whose purchase of foreign government bonds made possible the successful floating of several large league loans.

Details were not available here as to when the league loans committee will next meet. It was stated, however, that Wadsworth, had become thoroughly familiar with the problems of international finance. At one time, he was associated with Stone & Webster, of New York and Boston.

Christianity Is Declared To Be Life of Civilization

Millions Would Not Be Suffering If Teachings of Stewardships Had Been Observed, Dr. William T. Ellis Tells Presbyterians.

"Without Christianity there can be no civilization," Dr. William T. Ellis, of Swarthmore, Pa., noted author, writer and newspaperman, told the congregation of the Central Presbyterian Church last night.

Dr. Ellis, speaking in behalf of home missions, said that morality hinged on Christianity, social security on morality, and civilization on social security.

A man of widespread knowledge on local and national affairs, Dr. Ellis, a former war correspondent, set forth four problems confronting the world today.

"There is, first, a corruption of our Christian standards," he said. "Banks would not have failed, fabulous wealth would not lie idle and millions would not be suffering if the teachings of stewardship had been observed. Business is "shot through" with corruption and crime, politics are defrauded and racketeers are maintaining partnership with good citizens—this can be prevented where the convictions of Christian manhood prevail.

"Our second problem is an intertwined problem of unemployment, depression and fear. A simple Christian conception of brotherhood and mutual interdependence marked our national beginning. This is now submerged by a tide of material individualism and selfishness. The present condition of things insures a general change which will come peacefully but awfully as a result of suffering.

"Our relationship to the whole world constitutes our third problem. We must maintain our self respect and rights, and help neighboring nations do the same. We must cooperate for achievement of a better world.

"I disagree alike," he continued, "with flabby internationalists who put every other nation's claims ahead of American rights and duties, and with our jingoes, who would live for self alone.

"And the fourth, and last, problem, is to Christianize America." Dr. Ellis brought out the vivid need of home missions. Indians, Negroes, Mexicans, Italians and many others are waiting for the help that is to come from the church, he said.

"All these problems," he declared, "relate to the church. There is no other agency to do the work of the church. Without the aid of the church, Christianity and all altruistic ideals would languish and perish."

ARMY RANKS OPEN TO GREEN RECRUITS

Former Service No Longer Needed for Enlistment in Third Corps Area.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Nov. 20.—For the first time in nearly two years, the Army Recruiting Service operating within the Third Corps Area has been authorized to accept original enlistments of men without previous service for the various local stations.

High reenlistment rates at the majority of posts have served to keep the various organizations up to approximate strength for some time. On November 1, however, there were 716 vacancies throughout the corps area, some of which have since been filled.

Quotas assigned to the three major districts and the vacancies to be filled are: Baltimore district—65 vacancies, of which 25 are for the Twelfth Infantry at Fort Washington, 25 for the Sixth Field Artillery at Fort Hoyle; 8 for the Third Cavalry and 4 for the Sixteenth Field Artillery at Fort Myer, Va., and 3 for the Medical Department at Fort Humphreys, Va.

Philadelphia district—25 for the Sixth Field Artillery at Fort Hoyle; 10 for the Chemical Warfare Service at Edgewood Arsenal; 4 for the Ordnance Department at Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Qualifications call for men of excellent character as vouched for by testimonials of representative citizens of their home communities, between 18 and 35 years of age and must have at least two years of high school or its equivalent, with minors requiring parental consent.

Fifty vacancies also exist for foreign service in Panama and Hawaii, for which recruiting has been extended to the Richmond district.

Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

JAPAN'S DEFIANCE.

Japan's answer to the indictments of the Lytton commission is now before the council of the League of Nations. The answer is a plea of self-defense and a denial that treaties have been violated by the Japanese seizure of Manchuria.

The Japanese government asserts that it was compelled to use force in Manchuria to defend its people and interests against Chinese outrages; that the Chinese people of Manchuria took advantage of the presence of Japanese forces to organize an independent government; that Japan can not be responsible for the consequences of her presence in Chinese territory if the occupation is in fulfillment of lawful rights; that neither the Nine-Power treaty nor the Kellogg pact has been violated; that Japan can not agree to withdraw in favor of an autonomous government in Manchuria, as "this would amount in practice to a disguised international control, and would not be acceptable to Manchukuo or Japan."

The council of the League of Nations is expected to refer the Manchurian question to a committee of the league assembly, which in turn will report to the assembly.

An issue of veracity is raised by the Japanese assertions that the Lytton report consistently favors China and is full of inaccuracies and misrepresentations.

The governments belonging to the League of Nations together with the United States Government, are now confronted by a nation which has trampled treaties under foot and which insists that they shall acquiesce in their violation. The nations have already declared that they will not recognize any situation arising from violation of treaties. Japan's plea for recognition of Manchukuo must fall upon deaf ears. The imperial government has no power to enforce the validation of its acts in Manchuria. By standing together in refusing to recognize the regime which Japan is attempting to set up, the nations can force the collapse of the fraudulent government Manchukuo and eventually enable China to regain possession of her territory.

Japan is wantonly throwing the dice of death in the mad adventure in Manchuria. She is antagonizing the world and inviting economic and financial reprisals of a ruinous character. Her people are desperate under crushing taxation, and a large proportion of them are in mutiny against the militarists who have plunged the country into distress and danger.

When the nations pledged themselves to renounce aggression and war a new era began. No nation can persist in doing what Japan has done without risking extinction by the operation of irresistible forces within and without. The world wants peace and security. The universal pledge renouncing war is a contract which can be enforced against a violator; not by war, but by means more effective than war. If the governments will now stand squarely upon their declaration of refusal to concede to an aggressor the fruits of aggression, the people of Japan will themselves put an end to the crazy scheme of Japan's militarists to rob China of her great territory.

MISCONCEPTIONS IN CHINA.

A remarkable change in the attitude of the Chinese toward American residents and visitors is told in both private correspondence and newspaper reports. It is due to the general belief that the United States favors China in the present difficulties with Japan. There can be no question regarding the sympathies of the American people in general, nor that the official communications regarding the occupation of Manchuria have arraigned Japan for violation of treaty obligations. The Chinese, however, have apparently gained the impression that America's traditional friendship for China is now taking the form of preparing to sustain that country with arms against Japan.

This feeling is reported from various sections of China by American residents. It has brought about new evidences of friendship that become almost embarrassing. American agents find unusual demand for their goods in preference to European as well as Japanese products. Even among the lower classes an entirely novel understanding is found regarding the championship of their cause by the United States. The sharp notes to Japan, the fleet in the Pacific, all news of American military strength or maneuvers are regarded as preparatory to lending assistance to China against Japan. These unwarranted surmises in China are for the moment proving beneficial to American trade, but doubtless will result in unfortunate reactions when it is learned that this country has not the least intention of taking up arms in the Orient.

A CHANCE FOR ECONOMY.

By extraordinary efforts President Hoover hopes to cut down estimates for appropriations by $700,000,000. About $150,000,000 of this saving will be absorbed, however, by fixed debt charges and tax refunds. The principal item to be attacked is the extravagant and unwarranted outlay for veterans not suffering from war disabilities.

More money is now paid out for the benefit of veterans not suffering from war disability than is paid to war-disabled veterans. This is not only robbery of the taxpayer, but is injustice to veterans suffering from disability resulting from war service. Many of them are unable to obtain hospital treatment because hospital facilities are already monopolized by former soldiers who are receiving treatment for illness and wounds incurred long after the war.

A reversal of present policy in dealing with veterans is made necessary by the condition of the Treasury and by the protest of taxpayers. The country must be relieved of the exactions forced upon it by Congress under the lash of a lobby that has operated with heartless disregard of the plight of genuine war-disabled veterans. As matters stand the public is paying $350,000,000 or more per year to a favored class of citizens who are no more entitled to free hospital treatment than any other citizen who may be knocked down by an automobile.

In addition to this huge exaction, veterans' organizations are demanding prepayment of the bonus, amounting to $2,300,000,000 more. Some observers are wondering whether President Hoover will not be fortunate if he can prevent the imposition of this threatened additional burden, to say nothing of hoping to induce Congress to lop off present extravagance.

OIL TARIFF INEFFECTIVE

In view of the bitter controversy that raged about the oil tariff which was enacted in the revenue bill last spring, economists have been watching with keen interest for evidence of its effect. It is too early to appraise the results of the oil tariff from a comprehensive viewpoint, but indications now available suggest that it may injure rather than benefit the petroleum industry.

The duties imposed on crude oil, gasoline, lubricating oil and other products were almost prohibitive. During the third quarter imports of crude were 74 per cent smaller than during the second quarter, when oil was on the free list. Importation of refined products fell 67 per cent. Apparently the "protection" sought by the oil interests has been fully given. Even when oil was on the free list only about 10 per cent of the amount used in this country came from abroad. Presumably only that type of oil which does not compete with the American product will continue to be imported.

There was never any question as to the practicability of shutting out imports. Opponents of a tariff for oil contended that it would be of no benefit to the independent American producers who sponsored it and that it would have unfavorable reactions against petroleum exports. It is now apparent that the duties have had virtually no effect upon domestic oil prices. The large producers merely draw more heavily upon their oil wells in this country, while using their foreign wells to supply foreign demands.

Exports of crude petroleum fell off 16 per cent during the third quarter, after the duties had become effective. Refined products, which are one of the United States' chief exports, fell off 30 per cent. The volume of exports, including both crude and refined products, is nearly 50 per cent greater than the volume of imports. Consequently, most of the benefit derived from smaller imports has already been cancelled by a loss of export demand.

Further losses in the export demand for oil products may be expected. Refineries are being built in the West Indies to handle the South American oil that formerly came to the United States for refining and shipment to Europe. The full extent of this development probably will not be felt for several years. But it is apparent that in cutting off a small trickle of imports that was steadily diminishing, Congress has impaired a large export business, without helping American oil producers.

NEW YORK BANKRUPT.

New York is awaking to the fact that its municipal government is on the verge of bankruptcy. Comptroller Berry has taken unusual precautions to conceal the city's financial records from all investigators, even from the bankers who are asked to make fresh loans. But the public knows enough of New York's plight to expect a financial breakdown unless immediate steps toward retrenchment are taken. Grave doubt is expressed as to the city's ability to meet its pay roll on December 1.

A few months ago Mayor McKee began a vigorous economy campaign. His accomplishments for the first few weeks were remarkable. New York began to think that at last the city government was in capable hands. But the new mayor was blocked by Tammany Hall. His economy budget was cast aside. Economy is one of the foremost sins in the Tammany creed. Lower city expenditures would mean less money for patronage and jobs. Some pretense at reducing extravagance was made, and then a typical Tammany budget was approved.

As a result bankers are refusing to advance more funds to New York to meet current expenses. A few weeks ago the bankers undertook to raise $21,500,000 for the city government through the sale of notes maturing in six months. In spite of their high interest yield and their short duration, a large portion of these notes remain unsold. Investors do not have sufficient confidence in the wealthiest city in the world to buy its securities for half a year. Here is indeed a deplorable picture of municipal incompetence.

Tammany had a chance to redeem itself by nominating Mayor McKee to succeed himself in that position. But Tammany turned its back upon the man who is fighting to save New York's credit and reform its government. The Tiger succeeded in electing an organization candidate who is fully susceptible to boss rule. That did not perturb Mayor McKee. But when Tammany persistently frustrated his efforts to put New York on a sound financial basis, the mayor voiced his disgust before the New York State Chamber of Commerce, calling upon all citizens to unite in the establishment of a "decent regime."

A revolt against Tammany rule seems to be in full swing. Prominent leaders and civic organizations are rallying to the support of Mayor McKee, and indications are that he will be an independent candidate for mayor in 1933. At any rate, it is certain that a powerful anti-Tammany campaign will be waged during the coming year. The popularity of Mr. McKee was indicated by a large number of votes cast for him in the recent election, although he was not a candidate.

In the meantime the fate of municipal government in New York hangs in the balance. Unless some drastic action is taken to avert bankruptcy New York may descend to the level of municipal degeneracy that exists in Chicago. The impotency of these two great cities is a disgrace to the Nation.

WHY RUSSIA STARVES.

Soviet Russia's food shortage has become a serious problem. The people are living on meager rations, without much hope of improving their condition. Soviet officials carefully conceal information on the food supply, but widespread suffering is expected during the winter.

Trade in Russia is not conducted on a commercial basis. If it were, food would not be exported while the Russian people are near starvation. Food prices are extremely high in Russia, especially in private trade. In all the world outside of Russia food prices are very low and a superabundance of foodstuffs is available. Yet the Soviet is exporting agricultural crops at disastrous world market prices to secure funds to pay for its industrialization program. The needs of the people are subordinated to the ambitions of the Communist dictators who are trying to carry out the five-year plan. Presumably this method of starving the people to pay for industrial machinery will continue, because the Soviet has obtained large orders on credit and must continue to export foodstuffs or default in its payments, which would cut off all future credit.

Another factor that enters into the Soviet dilemma is the unproductivity of the factories after they are built. Bungling workmen and Communist red tape make efficient operation impossible. Farmers have been induced to work and starve for several years in the hope of raising their standard of living. It is not surprising that with the breakdown of their hopes they lose all interest in farming and raise only enough food for their own use.

THE SPEECHLESS TURK

From the Boston Transcript.

At midnight in his unguarded kitchenette the Turk lies dreaming—his dreams shifting to nightmares in which he sees himself now covering his head with the ugly black derby of the western glaour, now twisting his tongue as he outlines the chirography of the infidel dogs, again tangled up in an intricate coil of modern plumbing. Nor does the morning sun bring balm to his spirit. Only a few days ago he opened his door to find an irade posted on the wall telling him that he must take another step in imitation of the detested foreigner: he must assume a family name. "Hussein the Forlorn," "Abdullah the Crookshank," "Fatima the Star-Eyed," names which have been adequate in a country of small self-contained communities, must give way to patronymics.

What is a poor Turk to do? Shall the children of Hussein be known as Johnnie and Susie Forlorn? Shall the straight-limbed offspring of Abdullah carry forever the name of Crookshank? Shall Fatima's name be lost in that of her husband? Or will the restless Kemal scatter old American telephone directories among the populace and leave them to pick out the names there that suit their fancy? If that should come to pass the unspeakable Turk will become unspeakable in a new sense—unable to pronounce his own name.

Surely the old way was best—the way that once prevailed among our own ancestors, when trades and qualities gave a man his name, when, behind the line of battle at Senlac and Agincourt, the field for acres upon acres glowed with the forges of the Smiths, sharpening battle-axes, tinkering at cross-bows, hammering at morion and chamfrain and greave and cuirass to fit William Knight and George Squire and Jack Bowman and a thousand war horses for their grim business. What would the Arabian Nights tales be if they were done over after Kemal's idea? Who wants to read about Sinbad Smith the Sailor or Noureddin-Slave-of-Love Perkins? And how about Kemal himself? Does he come under the law? Will he be known to posterity perhaps as Kemal Throttlebottom Pasha?

Driving Them Out.

POST HASTE

Hamlet's dilemma was no worse than that of Progressives who are soliloquizing on whether to try again for Republican chairmanships or curry favor with Democratic votes.

What would your banker say if you told him you had adopted the European plan and were going to be real mad if he asked you to pay anything on that note, or even the interest?

There is one sure result already noticeable from the current disposition to read mandates and sanctions into the election outcome—increasing nullification.

Communists had an opportunity on November 8 to take charge of the Government. All minorities have a right to be heard, but the fraction of 1 per cent of the voting strength of the Nation shown by the Communist party indicates the consideration due them in the formulation of legislation.

No one should be allowed to prevent even an insignificant Red contingent from presenting even impossible demands to the Government. With equal insistence no "army" of any color should be allowed to camp here and attempt to impose its will on Congress, or exact subsistence from the Capital.

We trust no nation or individual will be overcome with surprise today if Japan declines, at the suggestion of the Lytton report, to begin a face-wrecking retirement from Manchuria.

Speaking of the payment of just debts, European nations are experts at the game of being the first to appear abused and peeved—particularly when they know they are in the wrong.

Argentina has strong British leanings, but she can't play a winning game with the odds 20 to 1 against her among the Americas.

Japan caught up with western ideas of imperialism only to find that they are 20 years out of date.

Some congressmen should note that even the London Times can see that $20,000,000,000 of stagnant American trade is more important than $2,000,000,000 of lost exports.

South America threatens to lift the revolutionary record long held by Central American thumbnail republics, so they propose to abandon the restrictions of the 1923 peace pacts.

How insignificant suggested economies appear compared with the generosity of La Follette bonds and Patman bonus, which again propose to distribute twice the total budget.

Norman Thomas finds satisfaction in believing himself right if not President, even though he ran on the Left.

"Europe to protest if told to pay." In this country it's the notes that go to protest if not paid.

What is an intoxicating content? Only as many answers will be required as there are crookers of the merry elbow. PAUL HUDSON.

AN ANTIQUATED LAW.

The English law ordains that weddings shall take place before 3 p. m., says the London Express.

This law is an antiquated relic of the Middle Ages. The medieval canon law on which it was based said: Marriages shall not be made except in the daytime, for those who intend honorably and honestly must not fly the light.

This is not the age of Robin Hood. There is no earthly or heavenly reason why those "who intend honorably and honestly" should not be married by electric light as well as by daylight. Many weddings would be more convenient in the evening than at noon.

Are a Guest's Children Entitled to Liberties Which Your Own Are Denied?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THIS is not an indictment of the wicked furriner, but merely a case history of Americanism.

Some years ago, when Standard Oil held a virtual monopoly of the oil business in America, Big Business had become too big and powerful to have a conscience.

Abuse of power invited a crusade against all monopolies, and laws were passed to insure competition.

The original Standard Oil Company was forced to divide itself into several independent parts—each of which is now richer and larger than the parent company was at the time of the division.

During the crusade the public learned for the first time to associate bigness with corruption. Any business that had attained giant proportions was considered a menace.

That idea is current still, and laws still prevent the cooperation of American oil companies to check the waste of our natural resources.

Want of cooperation results in overproduction, wasteful competition and loss of the shareholder's rightful profits.

But observe what an alien company can do.

A Dutch and English concern managed by Sir Henri W. A. Deterding, having fought Standard Oil for markets all over the world, decided a few years ago to invade the American field.

The story of that invasion is too long to relate in detail. It included the purchase of several small oil companies that owned productive fields, the building of pipe lines and service stations and the marketing of securities.

Today the "Shell" organization spreads from coast to coast. It has 3,808 miles of main pipe line leading to its refineries in California, Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Illinois and Indiana. It has more than 30,000 service stations, and a wider distribution than any Standard unit.

Its properties have a net value of $306,597,786, with reserves of over $225,000,000.

And it financed every foot of its development by selling securities to American investors. The American public contributed $255,000,000 to build the business, and America's natural resources provide the stock in trade.

And still the law forbids American companies to cooperate lest they become too big and monopolize the field.

WHAT IS TO COME?

Press Surmises as to Probable Developments in Politics as a Result of the Election.

Turning to the Sales Tax.

Kansas City Times.

As the short session approaches, increasing attention is being given a moderately low manufacturer's sales tax as the principal means of completing a balanced budget. Several leaders of both parties in the House now confess they can see no other way out, although there again is talk of revenue from beer. But that is not advocated as a substitute for the general sales tax, and it is so uncertain a factor that it can not be depended upon in any measure for the immediate future. The sales tax alone would not be an adequate offset to the existing and pending Treasury deficit, but reduction of Government costs should do the rest. Virtually since adjournment of Congress, last July, additional members of that body have been realizing that rejection of the sales tax was a mistake. It is not too late to rectify the error, however, and it is a reasonable assumption that a genuine effort in that direction will be made.

The Breed Increases.

Burlington Free Press.

It looks as though Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, who went down to defeat in the Democratic debacle, might be happier out of Washington anyhow because the indications are that as he leaves Washington there will be close upon his heels a whole troop of "sons of the wild jackass" riding in from the Western plains to take their places in the seats of Congress.

Walking Back.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

September shoe production was at the highest point since October, 1929. That is a pretty sound footing for our march back into the sun.

Radio Czar Ritchie.

Baltimore Sun.

A report comes from St. Louis, where the National Association of Broadcasters is in session, that a czar may be chosen to direct the industry and that Gov. Ritchie may be asked to take the job. He would assume the functions that Will Hays conducts for the moving picture business and Judge Kenesaw Landis for baseball. But if that meant that the governor would be responsible for radio programs, the chances are that, if he does not decide to give over his political career, he will shy from the offer if he does not run away from it as full speed.

Too Many Governments.

Pittsburgh Press.

In Oklahoma the State Chamber of Commerce proposes to merge 77 counties into 57, lopping off 20 useless county governments, prying from the pay rolls hundreds of tax eaters, saving property owners $17,000,000 a year in taxes. Here's a real reform. Instead of blaming Uncle Sam for all their tax troubles, States can begin reducing overhead by consolidating their local government units and making them conform to modern conditions.

The United States now supports 250,000 separate Government units—school, road, irrigation, drainage and other districts, townships, counties and cities. New York supports 13,644 units of government, many of which are utterly parasitic. Michigan groans under 8,230 units, supporting at the public feed trough 42,902 officials.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Low Price of Wheat Does Not Bring Low Price of Bread—Less Bread Consumed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You know and I know that bread is considered a necessity in every home, the rich and poor alike, and as a staple article of food it should be put into all markets at a reasonable price with a fair margin of profit to the bakeries.

Today at the present price of wheat, the lowest, I believe, for over 300 years, the price being charged for bread is far beyond all reason and the people who are suffering under the depression are using it sparingly and the more fortunate class are using it more savingly.

From inquiries I have made at retail stores or markets I find that the number of loaves of bread being sold at present prices is much less than the number sold where bread retailed at 5 cents a loaf. P. F. S.

Historic Parallel in Pierce and Roosevelt Victories by 87½ Per Cent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Franklin Pierce, a Democrat, was elected President of the United States in 1852, defeating Gen. Winfield Scott, Whig candidate. At that time there were 32 States. West Virginia had not yet been carved out of Virginia. West of the Mississippi River, there were only six States: Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Texas and California. Of the 32 States, Pierce carried 28, that being seven-eighths, or 87½ per cent of the States.

In 1932 there are 48 States. Franklin Roosevelt carried 42 States, that being seven-eighths, or 87½ per cent of the States. After 80 years history has done a very exact job of repeating. G. H. KAY.

Prolonged Cold and Heavy Snows Predicted for This Winter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the first time in a number of years the indications are for a long, cold winter. I base my forecast on the daily weather map, which since the middle of October has shown seven storms and unusually early cold weather in the Northwest; that is, Canada and Alaska. After six mild winters it looks as if the turn had come, and indications are that we are in for a period of cold weather accompanied by considerable snowfall. I predict the snowfall for the coming winter will exceed the combined fall the last four winters.

Horatius Borah Has Many Supporters in His Defense of the Dry Bridge.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post there was a cartoon showing Senator Borah fighting back the wet army. It is all right for a cartoon, but as for facts, it is far from correct. There are 30 temperance organizations besides thousands of church people who are standing with Senator Borah heart and hand. ONE OF THEM.

Urges Expansion and Loosening of Credit by Banks to Aid Recovery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In order to reassert ourselves to past levels of well-being, credit, of all measures needed for rehabilitation, is the most important. Once injected in the arteries of our business structure, it stimulates industry, produces employment, creates consumption and accelerates the active pulsations of our commercial life, reflecting confidence and self-reliance, not only among ourselves but throughout the world.

Should the American bankers decide to do away with present business stagnation and, in cooperation with Washington, pledge their assistance in this hour of need, the wheels of industry soon would be revolving and millions of men be back to work. J. P. DEL MONTE.

Boston, Mass.

NO EAGLE-PINCHING.

Bankers report that many gold coins, long retired from circulation, are coming out of hiding, according to the Spokane Spokesman-Review, and that if there are signs of abrasion, the depositors are getting less than face value. This should be a warning to persons of the hoarding type that eagle-pinching does not pay.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

DADS.

Oh, I've a fearful taste in hats,
And cannot choose a tie.
But one thing I am sure of. That's A foolish man am I.
And all I do and all I say
Old-fashioned is and queer;
But that appears to be the way
Of every father here.

They wink at me behind my back.
They think it just too bad
That there should be so plain a lack
Of wisdom in their dad.
The clothes I choose are sad to see—
Too plain or too severe—
But that appears the case to be
With all the fathers here.

The mother and the children sit
And talk my follies o'er.
They confidentially admit
I need them more and more,
For surely I should go astray
Were they not watching near;
But that, I fancy, is the way
Of every father here.

I live the tales they like to tell,
The jokes they like to spring;
Upon my various whims they dwell
With gleeful whispering.
For youth at age will poke its fun,
With every passing year,
Which, after all is said and done,
Suits very father here.

ASHEVILLE UNVEILS SHAFT TO GERMANS

German Ambassador Pleads for World Harmony at Dedication.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—F. W. von Prittwitz und Gaffron, German Ambassador to the United States, pleaded for "reconstruction of the world" and an upholding of a "spirit of comradeship" between nations today as he delivered the principal speech here at the dedication of a monument to eighteen German sailors who died near here during the World War.

The ambassador spoke briefly as he accepted the monument, erected by the Kiffin Rockwell American Legion Post here, in memory of the sailors who died of typhoid fever during internment at Hot Springs.

"It is an old custom of soldiers to honor the departed foe in the same way as the departed comrade in arms," he said, "and the American Legion has always remained true to this tradition."

"Our gathering today is, in the first place, a memorial service in honor of those who passed away, but it has still another significance. It is a demonstration of international goodwill and comradeship and an outward sign of the definite reconciliation of our two peoples which so fortunately began shortly after the great war."

Refers to World Crisis.

Ambassador Prittwitz touched on reestablishment of "normal commercial and political relations" between Germany and the United States and of the "critical" economic situation which "confronts the present generation."

Speaking of armaments, he said "Germany is happy to find herself in the same line with the United States when she advocates disarmament, not only because it has been promised to the world in the treaties concluding the World War, but also because she sees in it an effective means to clear the general political atmosphere from detrimental oppression and to bring relief to the various national economic bodies from unproductive expenses.

"Human ties which for centuries have existed between our two nations have facilitated the reestablishment of our friendly relations after the tragic interruption during the World War. May this monument stand as an imperishable symbol of the friendship between our two peoples and a mark of our determination to maintain it for all future to come.

Grief Is Universal.

"I can discuss the past today with an open mind and forget the bitterness and misunderstandings. The tears shed by the mother of an American boy who did not come back from the trenches are not different from the grief of her sister in Germany, whom the war deprived of a son or husband."

The ambassador said that "the maintenance of peace and the prevention of war are the foremost aims of modern diplomacy" and that "the outlawry of war as proclaimed by the Briand-Kellogg pact" from elements of a "new and promising development in international law and international relations."

Catholic Church Declared Oldest

Is Also Least Understood, Mrs. O'Hara Says in Park Address.

The Catholic Church was characterized as the oldest institution in the world and the least understood by Mrs. Frank O'Hara in an address yesterday afternoon in Franklin Park, under auspices of the Catholic Evidence Guild.

Mrs. O'Hara declared that controversy has not ceased to rage as to the nature and authority of the church for more than 1900 years—"since the memorable day when Christ gave to the twelve the charter for the institution which He had founded."

The speaker explained the meaning of the church as understood by St. Paul, developing briefly the many texts of the great Apostle of the Gentiles in which he calls the church "the body of Christ." William McEvitt discussed "The Use of the Bible in the Church."

Former Gladys Olcott To Wed Austrian Noble

Reno, Nev., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Mrs. Gladys Olcott Waddington, daughter of Dudley Olcott, former vice president of the Hanover Trust Co., will be married here tomorrow afternoon to Count Josef Ledebur-Wicheln, of Vienna.

Friends of the couple, in making this announcement today, said the ceremony would be a quiet one. Count Frederick Ledebur, brother of the bridegroom, and George Springmeyer, of Reno, Mrs. Waddington's attorney, will be the only attendants. The two expect to leave for California Tuesday and later plan a world tour.

EVENTS IN CAPITAL SOCIETY

Cuban Ambassador and Wife Will Be Dinner Guests.

THE AMBASSADOR OF CUBA AND SENORA DE CINTAS are the guests in whose honor Lieut. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim will entertain at dinner on December 16, at their home on Woodland drive.

Col. Guggenheim is the brother of the United States Ambassador to Cuba.

The Minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi have issued cards for a reception on Wednesday afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock at which they will present their daughter, Countess Gladys Szechenyi to society.

In the late summer, Mrs. Vanderbilt, grandmother of Countess Gladys Szechenyi, entertained at a ball to present her granddaughter to Newport society.

The former Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Diez de Medina, and their daughters, Senorita Maria Hortensia and Senorita Gaby, have left Washington en route to their home in Bolivia.

The wedding of Mrs. Bruce Lee Johnston to Mr. John A. Kennedy will take place today at noon at the apartment of Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, aunt of the bride-elect, at 2029 Connecticut avenue. The Rev. J. McD. Lacey, pastor of the Davis Memorial Church at Elkins, W. Va., will officiate in the presence of a few relatives, including Mrs. Elkins, Mr. and Mrs. William F. R. Hitt, Maj. William C. Marrow, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis Lee and Stoddard P. and Lee Johnston, children of Mrs. Johnston.

The bride will be given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Thomas Davis Lee, and Maj. William C. Marrow will act as best man.

Mrs. Johnston is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lee. Mrs. Lee was Miss Grace Davis, daughter of Henry Gassaway Davis, former senator from West Virginia, and one-time vice presidential nominee. Mrs. Johnston is a descendant of the Lees of Virginia, the Davises of West Virginia and the Bruces of Maryland. She attended Miss Madeira's School here, and was graduated from Vassar. She is a member of the Colony Club of New York and the National Society of Colonial Dames.

Mr. Kennedy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cornelius Kennedy, of Sioux City, Iowa. He prepared for college at Trinity, and was graduated from Coe College, Iowa, in 1922. He took his law degree at Georgetown University and was admitted to the Iowa and District bars. Mr. Kennedy has been a newspaper correspondent in Washington for the past ten years. He is a member of the Metropolitan Club, where he makes his home, and of the Chevy Chase and Racquet Clubs.

Mr. Kennedy and his bride will spend their wedding trip in the South and in Florida, and will be at home after December 21, at 2121 Bancroft place.

Miss Barbara Wright, who has been visiting Maj. and Mrs. Stanley Washburn at Lakewood, N. J., has returned to Washington to join her mother, Mrs. Hamilton Wright. Miss Leslie Wright will arrive in Washington today.

Miss Brall to Be Bride Of Morris D. Spurlin.

Mrs. N. E. Brall announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mildred Anna Brall, to Mr. Morris Deneen Spurlin, son of Mr. Edward W. Spurlin, at the tea which she gave yesterday afternoon at her home in Cleveland Park.

Mrs. Benjamin Chute Perkins, of Beverly, Mass., and her son, Benjamin Chute Perkins, jr., were among the guests at the tea.

Mr. and Mrs. W. David West entertained at dinner at the Shoreham Saturday night. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey L. Clarke, Mrs. Lucien A. Clarke, Miss Fenner, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. Herman M. Grimes, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Herbert, Mrs. Blaine Lipscomb, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Seibold, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Walker and Capt. and Mrs. Vernon A. Welte.

Mrs. M. Sheridan O'Connell and her sister, Miss Julia Teresa Sheridan, who spent the past five months at their summer home, Willow Hall, Cazenovia, N. Y., have returned to Washington and opened their house on Twenty-first street for the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mitchell, who make their home at the Whitman, in New York City, are visiting in Washington for several days, and they are stopping at Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Ben C. McGehee, of Little Rock, Ark., is spending a week at the Shoreham, while visiting her daughter, Miss Fanny Rose McGehee, who is a student at National Cathedral School.

Miss Helena M. Flagg has moved to Wardman Park Hotel, where she has leased an apartment.

Miss Elizabeth Lyster, of Detroit, entertained at luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Miss Louise Tittmann and Miss Priscilla Watson. Her guests were Miss Gertrude Faust, Miss Marion Shouse, Miss Catherine DuBois, Miss Nancy Jennings, Miss Jean Bryant and Miss Charlotte Cosby, of Brookline, Mass.

Dr. and Mrs. Horgan Plan Party at Kentucky Ball.

Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Horgan will have as their guests at the first assembly and ball of the Kentucky Society of Washington at the Willard tonight Dr. and Mrs. Victor Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Peak, Dr. and Mrs. Carleton Bullard, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Howze, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Harmon, Miss Helen Clifford, Miss Loretta Martin, Mr. John Richter, Mr. Charles Campbell, Mr. William Cranford and Mr. Smith Bowman, jr.

Mrs. Horgan is president of the society.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Boyle entertained at the dinner dance at the Shoreham Saturday night. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. William Mooney, Dr. and Mrs. Bache Gill, Mrs. Olive G. Ricker and Mrs. Peter Q. Nyce.

Mrs. Dickson Given Watts has leased an apartment at Wardman Park Hotel and is now established there for the winter season.

The marriage of Miss Alix Gress, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Valentine Gress, of Jacksonville, Fla., and granddaughter of Capt. and Mrs. John Stephens, of Atlanta, Ga., to Morgan Dykes Sellars, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Sellars, of Jacksonville, formerly of Americus, Ga., took place at Daytona, Fla., Friday.

Miss Gress attended the Spence School in New York, after which she studied and traveled extensively abroad. She is a prominent member of the Junior League and has often visited her many friends in Washington.

Sorority Group Holds Breakfast at Shoreham.

The Beta Chapter of the Phi Delta Sorority entertained at a breakfast at the Shoreham yesterday. The guests were Mrs. Nellie Bishop, Miss Lelia Brown, Miss Grace Collins, Miss Alice Crabb, Miss D. Elizabeth Falconer, Miss Mary E. Gainey, Mrs. Leona W. Gilbert, Mrs. Scotia Haggerty, Miss Cornelia Hamilton, Mrs. J. E. Loggins, Miss Emma Ludding, Miss Ina D. Russell, Miss Catherine L. Vaux, Miss Myrtle Wood, Miss Mary Wright, Miss Dorothy Wolff, Miss Adelaide Schlaudker, Miss Delia Sheldon Jackson, Miss M. Pearl McCall and Miss Hope K. Thompson. Miss Lelia Brown was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Mrs. John Cowles, of Des Moines, Iowa, is spending a week at the Shoreham visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Cowles.

Dr. William Hale will speak of the bright prospect of agriculture in the new Democracy at the luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club today at 12:30.

Miss Alice Hutchins Drake will give "a little talk on a large topic" before the Booklovers at the Y. W. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock. Her subject will be "Brenda Putnam, Sculptor" and illustrations will be used of photographs especially lent for the occasion, a new portrait bust of Amelia Earhart, one of Forbes-Robertson as Hamlet, and Puck, the beautiful fountain figure which is at the side of the Folger Library. A photograph of the Anne Simore Memorial in Rock Creek Cemetery will also be included.

The Navy relief ball, which is to be held Thanksgiving night at the Willard Hotel should progress with more than ordinary success and "smoothness" this year with the assistance of the efficient floor committee recruited from officers of the Navy and Marine Corps stationed in Washington.

Rear Admiral Henry V. Butler, commandant of the navy yard, as chairman of the men's floor committee, will be assisted by the following officers:

Rear Admiral S. S. Wood, Rear Admiral A. E. Watson, Brig. Gen. Dion Williams, U. S. M. C.; Capt. Hayne Ellis, U. S. N.; Capt. E. L. Woods, U. S. N.; Capt. J. D. Wainwright, U. S. N.; Capt. E. H. Delaware State Society Meeting Planned Tonight.

The Delaware State Society will have its monthly meeting tonight at the Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts avenue, and in addition to a program of classical music and choice selections, there will be music for dancing which will be a feature of the evening.

Mr. James R. Kirkland will deliver an address on the "Spirit of Thanksgiving." Miss Myrtle Barns, soprano soloist of the matenee artists' hour, and others will entertain. The Western High School sextet, Mrs. Saunders, manager, will also be on the program.

The event promises to be one of the best ever held by the Blue Hen's Chickens, and all Delawareans and their friends are invited to be present. Representative Robert G. Houston is president of the society; Miss Elizabeth Groves, executive secretary, and Shelton Fairchilds, chairman of the entertainment committee.

Miss Janet Richards, at her lecture this morning on "Affairs Political and International," will dwell especially upon recent developments in the foreign debt situation and the importance of the conference tomorrow between President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt. Other perplexing problems both home and foreign, will also be considered. The lecture begins at 11 o'clock in the red parlor of the Willard Hotel.

Air Program Set Tonight By Helen Corbin Heinl

If atmospheric conditions are favorable at 9:30 o'clock tonight, the performance of Helen Corbin Heinl, Washington concert pianist, may be heard from New York over the WJZ network, which includes Stations WBAL, Baltimore; WLW, Cincinnati, and KDKA, Pittsburgh.

Soloist in the Melody Moments program, Mrs. Heinl will play first "Liebestraum," by Liszt and later two Chopin numbers. Joseph Pasternack, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will conduct.

Model Home Seen By Large Crowds

Bright Weather Attracts Many to Residence in Emerson Street.

A bright Sunday doubled the crowds at The Washington Post model home which has been admired by hundreds who have visited it since its opening, November 13.

Built by the Cafritz Organization, The Post's model home is situated at 327 Emerson street northwest, and is one of a sightly group of Cafritz "lifetime homes" embodying all the excellent features that have given this organization an enduring reputation for good home building. The furniture and decorations by P. J. Nee Co., Inc., make the presentation doubly attractive.

The residence is a brilliant example of modern home planning. Every bit of it pleases and satisfies. In it, the Cafritz Organization, which has built more than 3,000 homes in the City of Washington, presents features thus far unheard of in dwellings at such low prices. The model home will be open every day from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock at night.

Federal Road Official Ill at Luray Hospital

J. C. Tyler, a member of the Engineering Division of the Federal Bureau of Public Roads, was stricken ill and removed to the Rockingham Memorial Hospital at Luray, Va., last night, according to an Associated Press report. His condition is said to be undetermined. Five persons have volunteered for blood transfusions.

Mr. Tyler, who has been connected with the bureau for several years, was one of a group of engineers supervising construction of Skyline Drive through Shenandoah National Park.

Craig Denounces Canal Opposition

Expert Says Rail and Port Monopolies Are Behind Treaty Criticism.

(Associated Press.)

Opposition to the St. Lawrence seaway treaty was termed "a cleverly fabricated facade of argument, built upon a tissue of exploded theory, and disproven statistics" yesterday in a statement by Charles P. Craig, executive director of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association.

Commenting upon testimony given last week to the Senate foreign relations subcommittee, now dealing with the treaty, Craig asserted "the great motivating force" behind the attack upon it there "at no time made its appearance as an honest argument."

Opponents, he said, were from "three forms of existing monopolies which now maintain a throttle hold" on Middle Western transportation to the Atlantic, naming them as "railroad protagonists, representatives of certain seaboard ports, and representatives of lake shipping."

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

WHEN the Government's case against the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Co., the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. and other corporations is called in the United States District Court at Wilmington, Del., this morning, it is expected that it will be settled through a consent decree.

Officials said that details involved in the termination of the case, which has been drawn out for more than a year, but has never been brought to trial, would not be made public until the decree was signed.

When the action was begun the Government charged that the anti-trust laws had been violated through a system of cross-licensing of patents within the corporations. Other allegations of monopoly and restraint of interstate trade were made.

After being postponed a number of times, the suit came up for trial at Wilmington last Monday, but, in view of the prospects for settlement without trial, there was another postponement until today.

THREE of the country's leading industrialists will be heard over WRC at 8:30 p. m. as they address a dinner meeting of the Share-the-Work Movement in New York.

They are Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co.; Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors, who will act as toastmaster.

The complete "Well-Tempered Clavichord," by Johann Sebastian Bach, will be heard over the air when Columbia, in cooperation with the National Federation of Music Clubs, presents Sylvia Sapira, concert pianist, in a series of twenty broadcasts, to be heard each Monday from 2:15 to 2:30 p. m., over WJSV.

Miss Sapira will play the entire collection of compositions in the monumental Bach work, a total of 48 preludes and fugues, including two selections in each form written in every key. The independent and original experiments in structure made by Bach in these works have come to be considered as the bible of piano composition.

Miss Sapira is a native of New York City. She was awarded a Juilliard scholarship in 1927, and she has specialized in the study of piano, harmony, counterpoint and composition. From 1928 to 1931 she studied in Paris with Mme. Nadia Boulanger. Her repertoire includes almost all all of Bach's compositions for piano.

The heavy rainstorm, which swept the city on Saturday morning left a large number of disappointed children who had hoped to attend the Thanksgiving party given by "Aunt Sue and Polly" in the National Press Club Auditorium, but it also was a cause for rejoicing for a few of the hungry who look to the Salvation Army for food.

A miniature loaf of bread is given each child who visits the broadcasts. Since only 800, about half the expected number, turned out Saturday, the extra supply of bread was sent to the Salvation Army.

SHAKESPEARE'S famous characterization of an evil character, "King Richard III," will be presented by the Radio Guild in its weekly program over WRC at 4 p. m. today.

Fifty years ago Thomas A. Edison constructed a radio detector tube so perfect that it can be used today to pick up modern broadcasting, and an exact replica of this granddaddy of present-day radio will be used during a special program over the WJZ network at 10:30 o'clock tonight. The broadcast will be conducted by Orestes H. Caldwell, president of the New York Electrical Society, and Dr. Clayton H. Sharp, internationally known scientist.

Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College, will speak on "Frontiers and Ideas" during the broadcast under the auspices of the National Student Federation of America, WJSV 2 p. m.

MUSICAL selections for Thompson's Merry Dairymen program (WRC, 6:30 p. m.) include "Forbidden Love," "Here Lies Love," "Russian Slumber Song" and selections from "Sunny."

The Happy Tolmanizers will sing "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," "Friend of Mine," and "Watching the World Go By."

Germaine, who has appeared on local stations for more than a year as "The Little French Girl," brings stories and songs of her native country to WMAL exclusively beginning at 8:30 o'clock tonight. She will dedicate her opening program to the Red Cross membership drive.

IF Gracie Allen's crack-brained brother really existed he would be George Burns' brother-in-law. If Goodman Ace hired another actress to play the part of his wife in "Easy Aces," his real wife would be out of a job. Lots of the broadcast headliners are just actors on the air, but behind the scenes they are Mr. and Mrs.

Take Fred Allen, head man of the Bath Club program, for instance. Every Sunday night he bandies words with Portland Hoffa as though he hadn't seen her since the previous program. But it's an old story. Miss Hoffa—or Mrs. Allen, to keep the record straight—has been her husband's "stooge" since musical comedy days.

With Jack Benny and the little wife—Mary to the radio audience—it's a bit different. Mary made her first professional appearance in her husband's air show not so long ago and she did such a good job she was given the place permanently.

George Burns and Gracie Allen were in show business long before they met. They got together in Union City, N. J., at a time when each had an act but no partner. They teamed up and used George's act because it cost less than Gracie's. They opened in Boonton, N. J., and played Detroit on their honeymoon.

Two troupers, who have led a long and harmonious domestic career, through musical comedy, vaudeville and radio, are Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson. They commute to New York from their home near Springfield, Mass., to the broadcasting studios.

Others among those who are partners, not only in domestic life, but on the air are George Olsen and Ethel Shutta, whose romance began when both were on the musical comedy stage; Peter de Rose and May Singhi Breen, veteran harmonists, and Gene and Kathleen Lockhart.

DAVID ROSS, the announcer, now keeps his solid gold 1932 diction medal in a safety deposit box. He returned home the other day to find his youngster on the point of trading the prized medallion for a bag of marbles and a football helmet.

Ludington Line Opens New Norfolk Schedule

Dr. Luther Reichelderfer, president of the Board of District Commissioners, and other civic and governmental leaders made up a party which yesterday flew to Norfolk, Va., on the inaugural flight of the Ludington Airlines' new Norfolk schedule.

The party left Washington-Hoover airport at 11:15 a. m. in two of the company's trimotored airliners, arriving at Norfolk at 12:35. Appropriate ceremonies were held at the Glenrock airport there.

Members of the party included President James M. Eaton, of the Ludington Airlines; Fred Neely, of the Department of Commerce; Dorsey Hyde, of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, and J. Allen Riordon, of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co.

That Lonesome Feeling

88
IT HAS SENT BIM ALMOST OUT OF HIS HEAD WITH JOY— HE HAS REPEATED IT OVER AND OVER TILL HE KNOWS IT BY HEART—
11-21
THAT MESSAGE FROM MILLIE— I CAN'T GET OVER THE WAY SHE BEGAN IT— MY DEAR, DEAR, MR. GUMP— TONIGHT AS I SIT AT MY LITTLE BALCONY WINDOW OVER LOOKING THE BEAUTIFUL FOUNTAINS, I'M THINKING OF YOU—
AND SHE WANTED TO KNOW IF I WAS GOING TO VISIT MY RELATIVES, THE GUMPS— SO SHE COULD SEE ME REAL SOON— I WONDER HOW DEAR OLD ANDY AND MIN ARE GETTING ALONG— I'M GETTING AWFULLY LONESOME FOR THEM— IT WOULDN'T SEEM LIKE CHRISTMAS TO ME IF THEY WERE NOT WITH ME— I'LL SEND THEM A RADIOGRAM AND TELL THEM HOW I MISS THEM— AND THAT I'M COMING FOR THE HOLIDAYS— I'LL WRITE IT AT ONCE—
MY DARLING MILLIE— I CAN'T BEGIN TO DESCRIBE MY FEELING OF JOY WHEN YOUR PRECIOUS MESSAGE WAS DELIVERED TO ME— I THOUGHT MY HEART WOULD STOP BEATING— I WAS SO OVERCOME— YES— I AM LEAVING ON THE FIRST BOAT TO VISIT MY DEAR-DEAR RELATIVES, THE GUMPS— AND THE MINUTE I ARRIVE, I WILL CALL YOU— I WILL BE THINKING OF YOU DAY AND NIGHT— ETC.— ETC.—

DRYS AVER ELECTION IS NOT WET MANDATE

Prohibition Supporters Not Given Chance, Is Claim; Drive for Law Set.

(Associated Press.)

A group of organized drys, in a statement last night, said they "do not acknowledge the recent election as a verdict of the people on prohibition."

The statement was signed by F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Antisaloon League; Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, and Miss Izora Scott, of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. It said an informal conference had just been held by representatives of these organizations as well as the Association of Catholics Favoring Prohibition and the International Reform Federation.

Of the election, the statement said: "Politicians had maneuvered the situation so there was no effective way in which the dry vote could be registered. There were three ways in which one could vote wet and no way in which they could vote dry and effectively express themselves on the important economic issues.

"The States having referenda with the partisan political machinery influenced by the action of the two major party conventions and with all their national candidates speaking in advocacy of a change in the Constitution to legalize the liquor traffic, and with no political candidates of these parties presenting the argument against the liquor traffic, the results were inevitable."

Plans were made at the recent meeting, the statement continued, "for an aggressive program against the return of the legalized liquor traffic upon the basis that it involved a moral and nonpartisan issue that can not be involved in the fate of any political party."

"The group was resolved," the statement said, "to fight against the wet nullification proposals and to reinaugurate a campaign for fundamental principles; that the public schools must teach the effect of alcoholic liquors, narcotics and opiates; that the Sunday Schools must instruct the youth in the moral effects of drinking; there must be inaugurated a new campaign of total abstinence pledge signing; we must teach the responsibility for law enforcement in community, county and State; that the temperance forces must continue their united efforts to get definite results."

Atlanta Jails 200 In Drive on Crime

Banditry Goes On, Though, With Shooting and Many Burglaries.

Atlanta, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Atlanta's civic campaign against crime rolled through the streets today, and swept about 200 people into prison cells, but in spite of that, banditry continued to hurl a defiant challenge.

Police, augmented by deputy sheriffs and patrolmen working on overtime shifts, cruised the streets last night and 75 men and women suspected of holdups were seized. Scores of others were hustled to jail for offenses ranging from drunkenness to things more serious. Seven of the crowd were identified as bandits.

In the face of that show of the law's strength robbers persisted in shooting and looting. L. M. Clough, a collector for chain grocery system, was shot in the face by two Negro women who leaped upon the running board of his automobile three blocks from the theater district on Peachtree street. About a dozen burglaries and holdups were reported to police during the night.

Educators Study Far East Tonight

Trade Effects of Situation in Manchuria Topic at American U.

Local educational leaders will gather tonight at American University, 1901 F street northwest, under auspices of the Academy of World Economics to discuss "Economic Factors in the Manchurian Situation."

Prof. Daniel Houston Buchanan, of George Washington University, will present the main paper of the evening. Others who will speak briefly include Prof. A. E. Zucker, of the University of Maryland; Charles K. Moser, of the Department of Commerce, and Paul Myron Linebarger and other authorities on the Far East.

The Academy of World Economics was established here last April and is affiliated with the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Directors include Dr. John Donaldson, professor of political economy, of George Washington University, and Dean William F. Notz, of the School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University. Tonight's meeting will start at 8:30 p. m. The public is invited.

GRAPE MEN TO SEEK EQUALITY WITH BEER

California Growers Unite to Demand Square Deal From Congress.

San Francisco, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—How to float the light wine cask on the beer wave, which proponents of modification or repeal hope will wash the Volstead act off the statute books, is now the chief concern of California wine grape vineyardists.

To impress Congress with the desirability of giving wine the same consideration which might be shown to beer, two main efforts are being made by the grape industry and other groups:

First, to make the movement statewide, "with the objective of attaining unity of purpose and action by all the economic forces of California."

Second, "to achieve a united front with other grape-producing States, such as New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, Missouri and Pennsylvania, in demanding that light wines be legalized without delay."

Chief Wine Producer.

The quotations summarize the plan outlined by Sophus Federspiel, president of the Grape Growers League of California, to gain for the product of the vine, the same consideration which the next or a succeeding Congress might show to malt beverages. The State produces about 90 per cent o fthe Nation's wine juice grapes.

To elicit the support of agricultural, industrial, civic and business interests, the wine-grape growers, Federspiel says, will attempt to point out that the present investment of the grape industry is $350,000,000.

Under present conditions, he says, a "surplus of approximately 600,000 tons is spoiling the juice, table and raisin grape markets." Legalization of wine he believes will lift the weight from this market, constituting "the only possible salvation."

The lightening of the grape surplus will, he holds, benefit the grape-growing areas of the Eastern States, although they do not produce much wine juice. These districts also will profit by the increased shipments of Eastern grapes to California for use in blending.

Wine Grape Price Low.

Of the State's 27,000 grape growers, approximately 18,000 produce the principal varieties used for wine-making, although practically all of the production of the remaining 8,000 can be used in some degree for wine-making.

The total production for 1932 approximates 2,000,000 tons of all types, the California Cooperative Crop Reporting Service estimated. At this year's low prices the farm value of the principal kinds used for wine-making is approximately $5,000,000.

Wine grapes now selling at less than $10 a ton brought around $60 a ton in 1925, the price factor being due mainly to the absence of a surplus and not to prohibition, in the opinion of vineyardist officials.

Operetta Will Be Given At Walter Reed Dec. 27

The seventh annual presentation of "Songland's Romance," a minstrel operetta, will be staged at Walter Reed Hospital on December 27.

Young men and women interested in taking part are asked to appear at rehearsals at the Cairo Hotel on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Lieut. Charles Riemer is director.

What Today Means to You

"SCORPIO."

IF November 21 is the date of your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9 9 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:15 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. The danger hours are from 10:30 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. and from 8:15 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Astrological influences will make this day a lazy one; one on which not a great deal will be accomplished either in the field of physical activity or in constructive thinking. Energies recuperated on this November 21 can be used to great advantage on the morrow. A tendency to worry probably will be apparent but must be overcome.

The child born on this November 21 will probably be a creature of impulse. He will not learn to use his faculties of reason until well along in life. His road will not be the easiest because of that, but his conservative nature and his apparently timid nature will keep him from running into any serious trouble. He will be mentally alert, but lacking in powers of concentration.

Born on November 21, yours is a nature that radiates good cheer and happiness. Without striving to, you seem usually to see the happy side of everything. At times, though, you allow yourself to fall into the depths of despair and on these occasions you are inclined to reason that life is a pretty useless and aimless procedure. Guard yourself against these moments for your acts on these occasions may be detrimental to your own welfare.

Your activities are many. Business, religious and social duties occupy your days and fill them happily for you. You are direct in your thought as well as in your actions. You are a hard worker, and you can not stand to see things done in a half-hearted or slovenly manner. Whatever is worth doing, you feel is worth doing well. You are constantly striving for perfection. You have many friends and they are constantly increasing in number. There is something in your vigorous nature that attracts men and women of the same type, and your business and social friends most probably are of the dynamic type.

Particularly in their homes, these November 21 people strive to attain that perfection and harmony that is so essential to their lives. As parents they are unequaled, and they are loyal wives and husbands, loving and understanding.

Successful people born on November 21:

Henry B. Smith, clergyman and educator.

Lewis Henry Morgan, anthropologist.

John F. Miller, lawyer and soldier.

Theodore G. Thomas, physician and surgeon.

George W. Smith, educator.

Mary Johnston, novelist.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

A delightful morning frock of especial Mirande jersey. It is red, striped in black, and the collar-cape which is removable is of black caracul (Courtesy of Mirande, Paris). And your own Dah-ray designed the bag to carry with this frock! This bag is black kid with silver fastenings, with incrustations of red wool lace.

GREEN, the most notable color in nature! Green of grass, of slender, swaying trees, of the jade and lilac sea, of envy and jealousy! And green can make a woman look like a dark rose emerging from its slender stem, a sea nymph riding on a foam-topped wave, or like a sallow, withered leaf. She of the fair skin can wear greens, whilst both the dark and light hair offer a fitting contrast to this color. A woman in a green gown with her fair face as a highlight, crowned with golden or midnight lory, is indeed a picture!

Govern the wearing of different shades of green by its effect upon your complexion. Certain shades will make any skin seem sallow, yet even olive skin can be flattered by certain other rich greens that do not do this. Even as green forms a background for all the flowers, whatever their color, so green can form the background for any women if she is careful of the shade she selects.

Green is smart this season, often combined with white, blue or yellow. White and green look so like the ocean wave that it just makes one feel and look delicious to wear such a combination! Greens and blues combined are a most effective background for the titian-haired and for the Castillian brunette.

A blonde should not wear a too vivid green, and the opposite is true for the brunette. The white-haired woman looks well in this color. The intensity of the shade she wears depending upon her vitality and degree of personal coloring.

* * * *

By the time that one has the good taste to indulge in frocks of the special distinction owned by the one I illustrated for you today—one has really arrived at sophistication! Mirande has a special jersey this season, and this frock is developed in it. 'Tis of red, striped in black—and a cape-collar effect is of black caracul, removable—so that one might wear the fur piece with other outfits. Like it?

* * * *

Oh, if you want to see some Christmas cards! We thought up some that clever fingers can make at home, what with most of us having more time than money, and assuredly more taste than means—and strangely enough the results were better than anything we have ever seen for sale anywhere! Not only originality of idea, but easy to make, and entirely individual. Oh, there are several ideas and detailed instructions for making the cards so send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post and get back the leaflet of "How to Make Distinctive and Artistic Christmas Cards."

* * * *

And then I designed a black kid bag to go with the Mirande dress—yes, you've guessed that this is my new traveling outfit! Also that I am traveling again—somewhere chasing fashions—and the bag has dark red lace incrustations, and I have red suede shoes and brownish red stockings!

Culbertson on Bridge

By ELY CULBERTSON

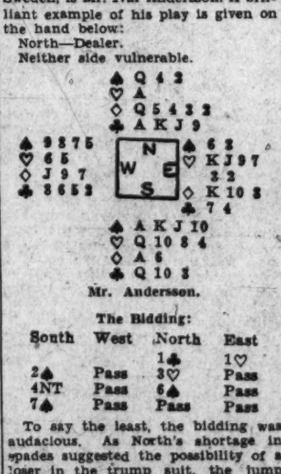
MASTERS OF BRIDGE.

505

THE adoption of a new international code of Bridge laws by the ruling Bridge bodies in the United States, England and France, probably marks a new era of international competition in this splendid intellectual game. Certainly, with people of all races and tongues using the same code of laws, there will be a more general understanding of the principles underlying the game and a more general acceptance of the most advanced thought along the lines of bidding and play.

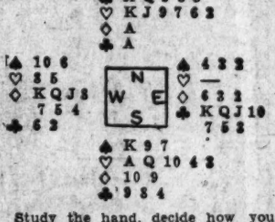
The Scandinavian peninsula, while it has taken no part in the adjustment of a new code of laws, has long been known as a great center of Contract Bridge. One of the greatest players in Stockholm, the capital of Sweden, is Mr. Ivar Andersson. A brilliant example of his play is given on the hand below:

North—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



Mr. Andersson.

East—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

(Copyright, 1932.)

The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1♣	1♡
2♠	Pass	3♡	Pass
4NT	Pass	6♠	Pass
7♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

To say the least, the bidding was audacious. As North's shortage in spades suggested the possibility of a loser in the trump suit, the jump from South's bid of four notrump to six spades was overenthusiastic. Perhaps Mr. Andersson should have taken his four-card length into consideration before bidding the Grand Slam. However, the way in which he made it was most interesting.

The Opening lead was a heart, which was won with the Ace in Dummy, and the Knave of clubs led and overtaken with the Queen. A heart was then led and trumped, and the closed hand reentered by leading the 9 of clubs and winning the trick with the Ten. Another heart was trumped in Dummy, and the last trump led, followed by the drawing of all the trumps. Dummy was then placed in the lead with a club, and East found it impossible to further defend the hand. South still retained the heart Queen, as East knew, so he was forced to blank the King of diamonds on the last club lead, whereupon Mr. Andersson discarded the Queen of hearts and took Tricks 12 and 13 with the Ace and Queen of diamonds.

The bidding was very strong, but, really, if they play this well in Stockholm, I can see that they are going to profit greatly by the increased bonus provided in the international code for the bidding and making of Grand Slams.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

BREAKING backs and blue Monday are things of the past. They have no place in our modern picture of things. Still there are many women who haven't power washers and wringers, and can not, times being as they are, have their laundry done. For them Cleanliness Institute offers very valuable hints.

First, they tell us that "clean clothes have a refreshing effect on weary bodies and tired dispositions; that clothes should be washed before they become badly soiled; that frequent washing with less dirt to be removed is easier on the clothes and the person doing the wash, and that plenty of fresh soapsuds help carry the load—tired suds make tired women." Sound enough advice, you'll grant.

Sorting.

Now to work. Sort clothes first. And sit while you sort. In fact, sit whenever you can instead of standing. It is far less fatiguing. There's a right and wrong way to sit. Strange as it may seem, the wrong way is to sit down, slumping, slouching over, chest contracted and shoulders drooping. The right way, do try it, is to lower body into it gracefully by using muscles of legs and back and keeping spine erect. You put one foot back, then bend both knees, thus lowering your body into the chair. And you sit up—up—and back so that thighs are on the chair and the lower part of the spine up against the chair back. Now separate silk, linen, wool, cotton, big pieces, small, in your own successful way.

When you have prepared suds, water, &c., and are ready for washing, lean over tub with back muscles contracted sufficiently to keep back slightly bent forward from hips. Keep abdomen in. When bending arms, elbows should be well out at sides rather than straight back. This helps you use the shoulder blade muscles instead of chest. Keep your position as you rinse in several waters.

Now—Hanging.

And this is the way we hang our clothes. Clothesline should be just high enough to give you a good stretch, not too high. Your basket on a stool, so you won't have to bend over. Breathe deeply. Stretch up. Stand erect and bend slightly backward; all the time, of course, keeping abdomen in. By the way, notice that this exercise of hanging brings an entirely different set of muscles into play from that of the washing. An old custom, and a good way to get some good fresh air and smile at the sun.

Tomorrow—What do you think? We'll take time out to relax luxuriously. Oh yes, you'll find a few minutes a day—it's for beauty's sake!

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

METALLIC FOOD POISONING.

DR. B. E. WAGNER offers one explanation of the fact that a group of persons were poisoned by drinking a lemon drink. The liquid had been heated in a gray granite ware vessel in which it had been allowed to stand for several hours. He says the poisoning was due to antimony, one of the ingredients of the enamel. This metal is the basis of tartar emetic, a medicine long in use to induce vomiting in croup and in some other disorders.

Much of the supposed lead poisoning formerly fairly prevalent in the printing trade was due to antimony, an ingredient of printing type. There is no dispute as to the possibilities of harm from antimony. He says that ordinary gray enamel contains 3 per cent and up to 7 per cent of this metal. All metals are in some measure poisonous—some more, some less. Even those that are most necessary for health are poisonous if they get into the tissues in excess.

Another truth is that all metals are dissolved in small part by watery fluids that are kept in contact with them. As a rule a sour fluid dissolves more metal than one that is not sour and a hot fluid more than a cold one. Vinegar, lemon juice and sour liquids of that family are not to be compared with mineral acids as a solvent of metals, but even these very mild sours are better solvents than plain water.

In this case the large gray enamel vessel was in contact with a warm dilute acid for several hours, and it is probable that in that time enough antimony went into solution to cause poisoning.

Dr. Wagner is authority for the statement that the enamels used in cooking utensils contain no lead, though that metal is still an ingredient of the enamels used in bath tubs, sinks and bowls.

— CANKER SORES.

F. W. K. writes: To those troubled with canker sores I would suggest the use of nitric acid. First, dry the parts affected by absorbent cotton, then dip the end of a toothpick into the acid and touch the sore with a small quantity of it. This will end the canker sore.

In my work as a dentist I come in contact with a great many of these cases and I have used this treatment for the last 20 years and find it very successful in controling these sores.

REPLY.

Your cure is all right. I have had experience with aromatic sulphuric acid used in the same way for more than 40 years.

How do you prevent them?

SNAPPING JOINTS.

Mrs. S. J. C. writes: I have noticed snapping joints recently, particularly in my feet. Is there danger of this developing into a case of serious arthritis?

Is it a matter of diet? Would constipation over a period of years be a contributing factor? I confess I am somewhat worried.

REPLY.

This is a mild form of arthritis. Fortunately, it is not usually a forerunner of a severe inflammation of the joints. I confess I do not know of a diet that would lessen it. Nor do I know of evidence that constipation causes it.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

A THANKSGIVING CHICKEN.

(Department of Agriculture.)

A large chicken cooked in the casserole with a savory vegetable mixture makes an excellent Thanksgiving dish if you prefer a change from a roast bird. This is a good method for an older, heavier bird that requires low, slow, moist cooking. All the juices are retained in the gravy and the seasonings of the gravy penetrate the pieces of chicken, giving them a fine flavor. Browning the chicken first also adds to this rich flavor. The steam kept in by the tight lid makes the meat deliciously tender.

A good menu built around this casserole chicken would be hot riced potatoes, sweet or white, or flaky boiled rice; spinach, string beans or any other green vegetable; spiced crabapple jelly or some other tart relish, and the traditional pumpkin pie.

Chicken With Vegetables.

3 carrots
1 bunch celery
1 onion
1 green pepper
4 or 5 pound fowl
2 tablespoons butter or other fat
1 cup hot water
1 cup milk
1½ tablespoons flour

Slice or chop the vegetables in very small pieces. Cut up the fowl, season with salt and pepper, dust with flour and brown delicately in the fat. As the meat is removed from the frying pan place it in a casserole. Pour the chopped vegetables into the frying pan and let them absorb the browned fat. Then transfer them to the casserole, add a cup of hot water, cover and cook in a slow oven (275 degrees F.) for three hours, or longer if the fowl is very tough. Add more water from time to time if necessary. Just before serving, remove the pieces of fowl and add the milk and flour, which have been mixed. Cook for ten minutes longer and pour the vegetable sauce over the chicken, or replace it in the sauce and serve from the casserole.

"The Capital's Greatest NEWSpaper"

GRAINGER IS GUEST IN KINDLER PROGRAM

Pianist's Presentations Are Well Liked; Compositions Are Applauded.

The pleasing custom inaugurated by Hans Kindler, leader of the National Symphony Orchestra, of bringing guest soloists, composers and conductors to feature the Sunday afternoon concerts was responsible for the presence yesterday of Percy Grainger, poet of the piano, composer and musician, at the concert in Constitution Hall.

Furthermore, the program was adorned with two compositions of Mr. Grainger, "Blithe Bells," and "The Gumsuckers March," in which the Australian composer puts a great deal of local color from that far land.

As soloist, Mr. Grainger left nothing to be desired. In his playing in Grieg's lovely "Concerto in A Minor," he combined a delicacy of interpretation and vigor in execution. The concerto has much of brilliancy in it, anyway. In the hands of Hans Kindler, his musical men and Percy Grainger it was a poem of melody.

Memories of Musical Clock.

Memories of Marie Antoinette's musical clock at Versailles, celebrated in history, were aroused by the orchestra's playing of the Ballet Suite No. 1, by Gluck-Mottl, as the opening number of the program. For the "Musette" one of the numbers of that suite is one of the ten pieces played by the clock.

That Washington has every reason to retain its pride in the National Symphony Orchestra was demonstrated again and again yesterday. In the ballet suite the ensemble tones and the individual instrument voices were deftly produced and the unity of attack, quick response to the leader's baton and vivid reading of the scores added to the delights of the afternoon.

Mr. Grainger in the concerto displayed a real love of the works of the Norwegian composer and put into his solo work the poetry demanded in a true interpretation of Grieg, a task in which he was ably seconded by Mr. Kindler and the orchestra.

The trills and cadenzas with which this work abounds were admirably handled by Mr. Grainger, whose touch is mellow, masterful and of technical brilliancy.

The lovely Adagio was particularly affective and the appreciation of the audience was shown by a veritable ovation at the conclusion of the concerto.

Composition Applauded.

A similar welcome was given to Mr. Grainger's compositions, especially "The Gumsucker's March," whose gay passages aroused the enthusiasm of yesterday's audience. Its musical merits were appreciated as well. Altogether, Mr. Grainger has every reason to be satisfied with his reception yesterday.

Other orchestral numbers were Tchaikovsky's "Andante Cantabile," from "Symphony," always a favorite with concert goers, and Liadow's dainty "Tabatiere a Musique," with its music-box tinkling tunes.

Upon special request the Mossolov "Iron Foundry" was repeated. It was put at the end of the program, so that those who do not enjoy the music of clanging steel in modern machine rhythms might depart if they so desired. Of course, some listeners did leave the hall, but probably teas and early dinners were more responsible for the desertion than dislike of the thrilling, unforgettable "Iron Foundry," played with vim and enthusiasm by the orchestra and with evident enjoyment, if the smiling faces of the musicians were any criterion.

It was a great concert and set a high standard for Sunday afternoons with the National Symphony Orchestra.

Post Offers Prizes for Best Slogans of Faith in U. S.

Ann Harding and Richard Dix, who are the stars of "The Conquerors," which opens at RKO-Keith's tomorrow, and in connection with which The Washington Post today announces a great contest.

$50 in Cash and Other Awards in Contest on Show at Keith's.

Believing that the future of America is bright, regardless of past adversities, including the depression, The Washington Post and RKO-Keith's Theater today announce a contest open to young and old alike to furnish a 1933 slogan or creed expressing the faith of Americans in America.

The occasion for this contest is the showing of the photoplay, "The Conquerors," at RKO-Keith's beginning tomorrow. In this picture a couple face all the problems which confront citizens of the United States today and over a period of 60 years they find that America is a fine place in which to live.

"You Can't Stop America" is one of the slogans being used in advertising the picture. It is a similar slogan or some fitting creed which all Americans may follow that is sought in this contest. School children and grandparents alike are eligible to compete, and the more slogans and creeds the better. The only persons barred are employes of RKO-Keith's and The Washington Post and their families.

Richard Dix and Ann Harding are the stars of the picture and a brief idea of the theme may be obtained from this paragraph of description used by the producers of the film:

"Down the pathway of the years they went, hand in hand as lovers... their eyes beholding the vision of a dauntless nation as their hearts helped mold it. Wars!....Panics!....Heartaches!....Heartbreaks!....such were were the fire that forged the steel for their swords and their plows... for they came with conquerers' blood in their veins and banners of courage flying!"

As prizes in this slogan-creed contest, The Post and RKO-Keith's offer $25 for the best slogan or creed; $15 for the second best, and $10 for the third. In addition, ten other prizes will be given. They will be pairs of tickets at RKO-Keith's.

Contestants have until Sunday midnight to file their slogans or creeds. The Post will carry stories daily until Friday giving hints on how to write slogans and creeds. After you have seen the picture or read the stories, send in your slogan or creed, addressed to The Conquerors Editor, in care of The Washington Post.

Winners of the contest will be announced in The Post the morning of Tuesday, November 29.

Remember, "You Can't Stop America."

'MET' TO OPEN 49TH OPERA YEAR TONIGHT

'Simon Boccanegra' First of Season That May Be Last for Diamond Horseshoe.

New York, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The "Diamond Horseshoe" sparkles again tomorrow night as the Metropolitan Opera opens its forty-ninth season.

This will be the shortest season in the Metropolitan's history—but sixteen weeks. Ordinarily, the season is 24 weeks.

The first strains of the overture, the lift of the lorgnettes will officially open New York's winter social season, albeit it's been whirling for several weeks.

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, the veteran impresario, has selected as the inaugural of his twenty-fifth season one of the least known of the works of that prolific Italian, Verdi—"Simon Boccanegra," a tragic romance of the short-lived Genoese Republic.

In the title role will be Lawrence Tibbett. Other principals will be the famed and venerable Martinelli and Maria Mueller.

Lease Up This Season.

As in past seasons, Tuesday will be a night of darkness, the Metropolitan Company making its weekly trek to Philadelphia.

This will be the Metropolitan's darkest season, financially. In years past, Gatti-Casazza has built up a sizable surplus that has enabled him to meet the depression years without any curtailment in program. But this surplus melted away by the close of the past season. It was necessary to trim drastically this winter's repertory.

Too, this may be the last season for the "Diamond Horseshoe"—the circle of boxes in the old building on Broadway at Thirty-ninth street.

The arrangement is this: The opera company leases from the Opera House Corporation. The directorate has been interlocking. There has been a demand in recent years among some of the patrons for a new home.

The Rockefeller interests have sought to induce the Metropolitan to move to their "Radio City," farther uptown. The lease on the Broadway property is up this season and the directors have delayed their decision.

Debuts of Four Americans.

This season will hear the debuts of four American singers: Helen Gleason, soprano, and Rose Bampton, mezzo-soprano from Massillon, Ohio; Richard Bonelli, barytone, from Port Byron, N. Y., and Richard Crooks, tenor, from Trenton, N. J.

The suspension of the Chicago Civic Opera also gave to the Metropolitan the famed Italian tenor, Tito Schipa, and the German contralto, Maria Olszewska. Another newcomer, but long a favorite in opera, will be Mme. Frida Leider, who in recent years has sung in many American cities with a German opera company.

Notable among the season's events will be the world premiere of "Emperor Jones," with Tibbett in the title role. This is Eugene O'Neill's play set to music by the American composer, Louis Gruenberg.

FUGITIVE KILLS SELF IN BESIEGED HOUSE

Suspected Slayer of Sheriff Suicide After Shooting Posse Member.

Mount Orab, Ohio, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—James Webster, 35, accused of slaying an Indiana sheriff, killed himself today while deputy sheriffs from three counties stormed with machine gun bullets and tear gas a house in which he had barricaded himself. He sent a bullet through his temple after he had shot and seriously wounded Capt. Lynn Black, head of the Hamilton County police.

Black was shot when he stepped in front of a window.

Webster had been sought in Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky since the killing of Sheriff Roy Compton, of Rush County, Ind., October 3. The officer was slain when he sought to arrest Webster on a liquor charge.

About 20 deputy sheriffs from Hamilton, Brown and Clermont, Ohio, and detectives from Indianapolis at 5:30 a. m. went to the home of Vernie Armentrout, alias Shafer, where they had heard Webster was hiding. Armentrout was ordered to remove his wife and four children from the building. He then was sent back into the house to ask Webster to surrender. Webster refused and Armentrout was arrested on a charge of harboring a fugitive.

Machine gun fire was directed at a window of a second-story room in which Webster was believed to be, and deputies fired at other windows. Black was shot as he backed away from the front door after throwing in a tear gas bomb.

More tear gas bombs were thrown into windows. Then a shot was heard inside the house and soon afterward deputies entered to find Webster dead. Coroner G. O. Tyler said he had committed suicide. Four bullets had been fired from a pistol beside him.

Webster formerly lived in Rushville, Ind., and New Richmond, Ohio.

Progress Is Made In War on Beetles

U. S. Not Hopeful, Though, of Stopping Spread of Japanese Pest.

(Associated Press.)

The Department of Agriculture's insect division holds little hope for stopping the spread of the Japanese beetle, but sees signs of relief for regions hit by the pest in the past. In his annual report to the department Secretary the chief of the Entomology Bureau said the beetles now had southern and central New Jersey, southeastern Pennsylvania, northern Delaware, a large area in Maryland and a considerable section of Virginia, as well as numerous other parts of the country, in their grip.

The bureau's studies, however, have shown the beetle is partial to rich, moist soil. It fails to multiply fast in sandy regions or in areas hard hit by drought.

The bureau has also made considerable progress in developing methods of destroying the pest. The methods include land flooding, used in the Jersey cranberry bogs; beetle traps, lead arsenate plant treatment, and fumigation.

Guards Watch as Town In Mexico Names Mayor

Laredo, Tex., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Citizens of Neuvo Laredo, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from this city, held a quiet plebiscite today to select a mayor, while soldiers from the Nuevo Laredo Garrison guarded the city. Threatened disturbances failed to materialize.

Dr. Gonzalez Trevino received a small plurality over Paul Resendez for nomination by the Partida Social Fronterizo, the count showing Trevino, 2,507, and Resendez, 2,458.

Rev. J. W. Weddell Dies; Formerly in Clarksburg

Lewisburg, Pa., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The Rev. Dr. John Weaver Weddell, a Baptist minister, who for 50 years served numerous churches in the East and Middle West, died late yesterday after a three weeks' illness with heart trouble. He was 77.

Dr. Weddell had served churches in Chicago, Cleveland, Davenport, Iowa; Oberlin, Ohio; Woodbury, N. J.; Dover, Del., and Clarksburg, W. Va.

Star Expresses Disgust on Return From Paris and London.

Malmo, Sweden, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Back in Sweden after a short trip to London and Paris, Greta Garbo expressed disgust today with the manner in which she said she was "persecuted" in those cities.

Her life, she said, had been made "misery" and her holiday lost any of the value it might otherwise have had. The actress arrived late Saturday night from Copenhagen and was expected in Stockholm tomorrow.

Greta Garbo used a black wig, horn-rimmed spectacles and other stage properties in efforts to avoid curious crowds in the European capitals, but Parisians found out where she was staying in that city and hundreds besieged her hotel.

Wheat Farmers on Strike.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Unwilling to dispose of their wheat at prices which bring them only about 25 cents per bushel, prairie wheat farmers were reported to have gon "on strike" today, holding their stocks for higher prices.

"BALI, THE LAST PARADISE." Second of a series of five illustrated travelogues presented Sunday afternoons by Burton Holmes. Motion pictures by Andre Lavarre; slides by Van Altena, colored by Mildred Petry. Projection by E. Jesse Greene.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Although duplicating in some measure the picturesque content of such commercialized motion picture features as "The Isle of Paradise" and "The Virgins of Bali," Burton Holmes' travelogue on "Bali, the Last Paradise," is so much more intimate, so much more comprehensive and so much more genuinely analytical of this beautiful East Indian island and its people that it quite transcends anything on the same subject that has preceded it to a Washington screen.

It probably will never be possible again to picture or describe the Bali that was revealed to his audience in the second of his season's Sunday afternoon travel talks in the National Theater yesterday. Mr. Holmes happened along on the Java-China-Japan liner Tjinegara just in time to record with his camera the primitive exoticism of a virgin island that soon will be "modernized" by tourist trade beyond all semblance of its present self. That already has happened to our own West Indian possessions, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines and most of the islands of the South Seas. Bali, truly, is "the last Paradise."

Landing at Boeleleng, on the north coast of Bali, Mr. Holmes conducts his auditors on a leisurely tour of the scenic wonders of the little Dutch possession, investigates its skill in agriculture, its untutored expertness in the manual arts, penetrates the bogus antiquity of much on the island that seems old but is actually new, and explodes the widely circulated but wholly erroneous legend that Balinese women are the most beautiful in the world—a race of Venuses.

Slowly wending our way from the fully clothed regions of the north to the seminudity of southern Bali, we are introduced to the ancient rituals, racial customs and distinguishing habits of a population described by the speaker as the least to be pitied of any people he has ever encountered anywhere on the face of the globe during 40 years of world travel.

Their strange community dwellings are minutely explored, the grotesque carvings of their myriad temples painstakingly examined, and their odd conceptions of music and the dance lengthily dwelt upon.

Following the brief intermission, the elaborate festival of cremation of the dead, with its seemingly endless ceremonies and confusing intermingling of rites for the departed that may be identified in turn as pagan, Christian and relics of a fanatical jungle savagery, is completely and, if it must be said, a little repetitiously, recorded in both strikingly colored still photography and close-up motion picture footages.

Rather than leave his audience upon the somber note of death, Mr. Holmes concludes his lecture with a brief glimpse of bronze nymphs and satyrs worshipping the Oriental Terpsichore at sunrise in the modern, jazy "Janger."

Perhaps in greater degree than will be the case in any other lecture in the series, the absence from the screen of the sounds and commotions so enthusiastically described by the speaker yesterday, was a source of profound regret, demonstrating, no doubt, one of the more flagrant injustices of the prevalence of the "talkies."

False Alarms Lead to Work.

St. Paul, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Those who turn in false alarms must polish the fire apparatus. Judge Gustavus Loevinger in juvenile court has ordered three boys to spend four hours each shining brasswork. They admitted calling out the department just for the sake of seeing the trucks speed.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT IS reliably reported that Leslie Howard refuses, at least once a week, to sign an agreement that would keep him in Hollywood indefinitely. Such a contract would mean playing any roles his employer might see fit to choose for him and the complete severance of all ties binding him to the stage.

Leslie Howard.

The viewpoint of this distinguished young English actor, as well as some illuminating and mildly startling revelations of the apparently distorted business of picture production, as it is at present pursued, are disclosed in a recent communication from that eminent operative of the West Coast finger-in-the-wind department, Mr. Hubbard Keavy, expert observer for the Associated Press, whose narrative this becomes at precisely this juncture.

"I can't give up the stage," Howard told me recently (Ed. note: This, I remind you, is the dulcet voice of Mr. Keavy to which you are now listening—or are you?) "because it's my life work. One never knows how long this movie thing will last—maybe only a few years. I should dislike very much burning my bridges behind me, forgetting the stage entirely, to take up a movie career.

"I like the stage so much that I believe I shall never be able to give it up. I like motion pictures, too—so well, in fact, that I haye hopes of producing some of my own.

"As an independent producer, I can make pictures much cheaper than the big producer can make them. For example, the film we are making now ('Animal Kingdom,' which he played in New York) will cost about $400,000.

"That is a terrific sum when you consider the limited appeal of the story. A producer who had no studio or talent overhead could make the same picture for one-quarter as much.

"I hope to be able to make films as one produces a play. 'Animal Kingdom,' when the curtain went up, cost Gilbert Miller and me about $17,000.

"After a run of 24 weeks, our profit was $105,000. That gives you another idea why I like the stage," Howard went on. "The odds are so great. If you are successful, you make much."

Some time early next year Howard expects to make his first picture. He is undecided whether to operate in England or in Hollywood.

His plan does not necessarily include the making of pictures from plays of which he is also producer and star.

"So often a play is not suited for pictures," he said, "that I intend to obtain stories especially for pictures. And unlike the present set-up, I shall pay the author a royalty on the proceeds, as we do in the theater."

Okay, Washington! The Post now speaking.

The matter of author's royalties has been a topic of intermittent discussion—mostly against—in the film industry ever since scenario writing graduated from its early status during the continuance of which $10 was a fair price for a movie script. If Mr. Howard should succeed in bringing about a definite policy of royalty payment for accepted and produced screen stories, he would carry with him to his grave the multiple blessings of the writing craft.

Lawrence Tibbett tonight will enjoy an honor that has not been bestowed upon a male vocalist in many years. Not since the death of Enrico Caruso, "the golden voice," has a male star been selected to open the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company's season in New York, until this year. Tibbett, eminent American barytone, is the man who breaks the rule.

Tibbett sings tonight at the Metropolitan in "Simon Boccanegra" before what has always heretofore been the most brilliant of all New York musical audiences, in a social sense.

"Simon Boccanegra" is peculiarly Tibbett's opera, having been revived especially for him a year ago to supply another leading barytone role—not too plentiful in grand opera. Appearing with him, among others, are Maria Mueller, Giovanni Martinelli and Ezio Pinza.

While Martinelli has contributed the prestige of an incomparable voice to many screen subjects, the Metropolitan does not, I think, include any other artist in its personnel with such distinguished achievements to his credit on the operatic and concert stages and upon the screen as Tibbett's.

Rather belatedly, it is feared, if one places his reliance in this tower of information, it becomes known that "Great Epochs in Painting" is the title of a series of talks being given in Stoneleigh Court by Miss Ada Rainey, former art editor of The Post. These lectures are illustrated and are concerned with the great painters who have illustrated the glory of Europe.

At 11:15 Wednesday morning, and at an unnamed hour the same evening, the great artists of Spain will be the topic—Murillo, Greco, Velasquez, Goya. For the three weeks following, on Wednesday evenings and Thursday mornings, the subjects will be Dutch and Flemish, French and English painting.

A considerable audience of invited guests, who sat up over the midnight hour in RKO-Keith's Theater Saturday night at the behest of Manager Hardie Meakin, to preview Radio Pictures' production of "The Conquerors"—and included in the number were John F. Curry, biggest brave in all Tammany Hall, and party—were privileged to enjoy an inspiring depiction of the indomitable spirit of the American people, their power to overcome seemingly insuperable obstacles to national growth and six decades of reason why this latest depression should be looked upon merely as a pause in the march forward to fulfill an inevitable and a glorious destiny.

The conquerors of the title, to be sure, are the members of a family founded in the story's romantic ramifications by Richard Dix and Ann Harding, who, as a young married couple, go West after the financial crash of 1873 to seek new fortune, but by implication they are the whole American people, whose spirit can not be crushed, and who, under the burden of every handicap, ever have demonstrated that they can and will go on.

While "The Conquerors" centers its climaxes principally upon the economic crises that have overtaken the Nation—in 1873, 1893, 1907 and so on through the years to the present—in the large view it is hewn out along the same general lines as that earlier epic of American pioneering, struggle and achievement, "Cimarron."

The story is unfolded perhaps a trifle episodically, and I wouldn't be sure that there is not an occasional anachronism in the development of events dealing with the 90's and early 1900's, but they are only minor disturbances in the orderly progression of vital events that are as entertaining as they are profoundly stirring to every worthy patriotic impulse.

I should be a bit reluctant to say that "The Conquerors" is to be rated on a par with "Cimarron," but should not hesitate a second to proclaim it far and away the greatest picture Radio has made since that imposing saga of Oklahoma's settlement, early struggle and magnificent growth and an American document that should bring a thrill of pride to the heart of every true American. It is made up of elements of infallible heart, patriotic and box-office appeal.

If you don't see another picture all season, you owe it to yourself to see this one.

Although "Androcles and the Lion" is the very last play on the Columbia Players' 1932-33 schedule, and is preceded by such interesting works as A. A. Milne's "To Have the Honour," now in rehearsal for December production; John (Nobel Prize) Galsworthy's "Escape," and other comparable dramas, it is "Androcles"—or rather the lion—that is topmost in the minds of all the Players.

Everybody wants to be the lion. Everybody is begging to be the lion.

The gentleman-actors say they can growl more fiercely. They can.

Director Orris Holland refuses to assume the responsibility of casting the part, so the whole thing is being given pause until it is determined who can make the best velvet paws!

Those who remember when O. P. Heggie made his first Washington appearance in this Shaw play, with Anatole France's brief whimsy, "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife" for a curtain-raiser, will recall that the make-up of the lion is one of the mane considerations!

Woman Defeated by One Vote.

Ava, Mo., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—The Missouri State Assembly will not contain a woman representative this year as the result of a final canvass which shows Mrs. Gladys B. Stewart failed of election in Douglas County by one vote. Mrs. Stewart, a Republican, lost to R. P. Weeks, a Democrat. The canvassing board rechecked the ballots five times before announcing a final decision yesterday.

7 COLLEGES SURVIVE IN NATIONAL GRID TITLE RACE

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THIS department had hoped to retain its individuality, if any, by refraining from selecting or having to do in any fashion with an All-American team, the choosing of which bids fair to displace baseball as the national pastime, but there has come a request from the Associated Press to set down a few of my All-American thoughts, if any.

Our faithful ally, the A. P., is currently engaged in the assembling of opinion from all sections from which the 1932 All-American will be selected, and Mr. Alan Gould, who has charge of such matters for the world's greatest newsgathering organization, has asked this department for All-American recommendations from this sector, if any.

My response to Mr. Gould's request has the saving grace, at least, of being to the point. Exactly four back field men of the colleges among the Washington group, and five of the gentry in the line have come under my notice as outstanding performers, all of whom I hesitate in recommending for All-American first-team honors.

Only G. W., Cards Boast Candidates.

The All-American timber among the colleges of the local group is confined to two schools, George Washington and Catholic University, as far as I have been able to observe and according to the reports of my various and expert operatives. Maryland, Georgetown and American and Gallaudet failed to produce anybody whose name conscientiously could be mentioned in an All-American breath.

Neither do I believe that the nine players I recommended to Mr. Gould deserve All-American berths just like that, but at least four of them might have shown to vastly better advantage if they had operated with the assistance of the so-called major elevens of the country.

The back field men who in my humble opinion distinguished themselves above all others are Johnny Fenlon and "Nig" McCarver, of George Washington, and Tom Whelan and Jan Jankowski, of Catholic U. In the line, I liked particularly the play of the two G. W. guards, "Zuzu" Stewart and Hardy Pearce; Walter Slaird, the Colonials' tackle; Gross, C. U. tackle, and Vinnie Fraatz, end of the same team.

Fenlon Rated as Best Back.

At the risk of drawing down the wrath of the C. U. student body and other admirers, this department unqualifiedly rates Johnny Fenlon the outstanding back field performer among the Washington colleges, even in the face of the brilliance of Tom Whelan and the dazzling play of McCarver.

Fenlon, according to my observations, can do more things with a football than either Whelan or McCarver, and do them better except in one phase. Whelan is the greatest broken field runner of the trio, but there his superiority ends.

Fenlon is the surest handler of punts and his ability to pass with either hand, and pass with almost unerring accuracy, rounds him out as the most versatile and effective man in the District back fields. He hits the line with more power and leg drive than any other Washington back, and can turn as pretty an end as even Whelan.

Whelan Fine Broken Field Runner.

For sheer brilliance in a broken field, Whelan has no equal, and this season he has even been pressed in service as a passer, but for general effectiveness he lacks the talents of Fenlon. McCarver, a specialist at off-tackle smashing and picking his holes, is perhaps the most spectacular player of the trio, but he, too, bows to Fenlon's versatility, as does Jankowski, the Cardinals' line-bucking especialist.

I hope I have not been misled by the colorful play of Stewart in the G. W. line, but I believe that his thoroughly natural showmanship goes hand in hand with his ability. It is certainly significant when Godfrey, Alabama's tackle, who in 1930 was an All-American himself, goes on record to the effect that Stewart is the best lineman he has opposed all year. And Godfrey has opposed the lines of Tennessee, Mississippi, Kentucky, V. P. I. and Georgia Tech.

If this is a surrender to the All-American craze, you are at liberty to make the least of it.

Hawks Defeat Celtics, 6-0, In Mud

Barry Goes Over As Colliere's Pass Paves Way to Score.

St. Mary's Drives in First Half Turned Back by Foes.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

"HERE'S mud in your eye," said the Mohawk center to his opponent in the St. Mary's Celtic line, as the Indians nosed out their rivals for the District championship by a score of 6-0 yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

Not only was there mud in the eyes of the 22 young men shoving one another around on the heavy stadium turf, but on every conceivable portion of their bodies. It was a perfect setting for a mud cake party, but the teams were intent on the more nobler, or financially remnuerative things in life.

Frank Stipe, Mohawk version of the Washington Monument, paved the way to victory in the final minute of play when he reached high in the ozone and hauled in one of Fee Colliere's numerous passes, despite the determined resistance of Don McCann and Ed Leary. Stipe crashed to earth on the Celtic 4-yard line.

Barry Scampers to Touchdown.

Three plays later, after the referee had set the ball 1 yard from the goal line as an off-side penalty on the Celtics, Pepco Barry sighted a hole at left tackle and whizzed through quicker than it can be told for the winning touchdown. Colliere's attempted pass for the extra point was grounded.

Despite the soggy condition of the field and consequent treacherous footing, Colliere elected to make forward passing the major factor in the Hawk offense. He flipped pass after pass to fleeting Indian ends and backs, many of which were completed for short gains, and the rest grounded. Colliere performed his task in an exceedingly nonchalant manner. All that was lacking was a cigarette and a rocking chair.

"Snorky" O'Brien was substituted at one of the end positions for the Mohawks in the third period. Mr. O'Brien, who bore a striking resemblance to "Wes" Byng, of Navy fame, played a bang-up game at his position, although he did catch one pass for a 5-yard loss.

Another odd feature of the game was the presence of several former Senator players in the Celtic line-up. Rumors were heard to the effect that they failed to be reelected in the last balloting.

St. Mary's Drive Futile.

St. Mary's mad a determined drive immediately after getting the ball in the first period. Snyder, Byrne and Leary slippity-slopped through to the 5-yard line before the attack collapsed.

Colliere kicked out to the 30-yard line and St. Mary's insurgated another drive that carried over into the second period and down to the 2-yard line, where the Hawks held for downs. The drive was interrupted briefly when the Indians took the ball on downs at the place where the 30-yard mark had been, but Lee Hensley fumbled and Johnny Lyons regained possession of the leather for the Celtics.

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 20 (A.P.).—With their backs to the wall, the Sing Sing "black sheep" fought valiantly today and staved off a gridiron defeat at the hands of the Danbury Trojans. The final score was 6 to 6, the first tie game since the convicts started playing football last year.

The 2,000 convicts and 1,370 outsiders cheered repeatedly in the final minutes of the game when Sing Sing stiffened and held off the Trojan attack. After a steady march down the field, the Danbury team had the ball on the 1-yard line on a first down.

Three line bucks were tried, but the convict linemen held like the stone walls encircling their playing field. Then the Trojans tried an end run, but half the "black sheep" team broke through to stop the runner.

Hayes made the Sing Sing touchdown in the first period, crossing from the 1-yard line after he had made a sensational 47-yard dash. Thompson scored for Danbury in the second period, going off tackle for 14 yards.

The convicts have played eight games this season, losing one and winning six.

MARYLAND U. BOASTS NEW BOOTER

Widmyer's Toe Seen Threat Against Hopkins.

EXCEPT that Al Woods, full back, received a spike wound in his leg, the Maryland team came out of its winning tilt with Washington and Lee at Lexington Saturday in good shape, and will have its full strength available for its old rival, Johns Hopkins, in the Baltimore Stadium, Thanksgiving Day.

It was fine kicking by Dick Nelson and Earl Widmyer, two sophomores, that enabled Maryland to beat the Generals, as the condition of the field was such that a consistent running attack was out of the question and forward passing almost an impossibility. The teams really played in mire and the ball soon became so soggy it was difficult to even hold it, much less throw it.

Nelson, who has earned his spurs as a kicker, did some fine punting, but it was the work of Widmyer in booting that proved the surprise feature of the contest. Widmyer has learned his booting since the season began and he displayed an adeptness in quick kicking against the Generals that should prove an asset in the Old Liners remaining games this season, with Hopkins and Western Maryland and in the two future years he has with the College Park outfit.

The Old Liners will have only one day of real work in preparing for the tilt with their most ancient rival. This will be tomorrow. Today they will do little more than limber up and Wednesday's drill will consist mainly in instruction on what defensive tactics to use against the Blue Jays.

Hopkins, considerably stronger this year than in many seasons, has almost two weeks in which to prepare surprises and prime for the Old Liners. Their last game was with Hampden-Sidney on November 11, when it beat the clever Virginia eleven, 7 to 0. In weight and in grid experience Hopkins will match Maryland when the teams line-up for the opening whistle at 2 o'clock Thursday.

G. W. Offered New Test Thursday

Oklahoma U. Brings Powerful Eleven to Washington.

Colonials Promise to Be at Top Form Thanksgiving.

THE "scantie-pantie" Sooners of the University of Oklahoma, who do battle with the Colonials of George Washington University in Griffith Stadium on Thanksgiving Day will present an offense rated among the most powerful in the nation.

In their clash with Nebraska last Saturday, the Sooners did not score, but when it is considered that Nebraska held Pittsburgh scoreless after the Panthers subjugated Notre Dame, 12-0, there is little in Oklahoma's 5-0 loss to the Cornhuskers to belittle the Sooner attack.

Those who regard the lightly-clad Sooners most highly are none other than the George Washington coaches, Pixlee, Walsh, Myers and Lee, all of whom have played or coached football out in the country that the Sooners hail from and therefore possess intimate knowledge of the style and tactics of Western elevens.

Oklahoma's attack is somewhat similar to George Washington's. It embodies a liberal use of forward passes and smashes outside of the tackles, like G. W.'s, and presents a short punt formation, which, again, is something like the formation of Coach Pixlee's huskies.

Triple-Threats in Back Field.

The chief roles of the Oklahoma offense are intrusted to a quartet of triple-threat backs. At the present time two of them—the Pansze brothers, Art and Bill—are suffering with injuries, and may not start the big Turkey Day contest, but even though these boys are not available for service, the Sooners will be well fortified with Bob Dunlap and Dick Simms ready and rarin' to go.

Dunlap and Simms have been conspicuous in nearly every one of the eight games Oklahoma has played to date, Dunlap with his uncanny place-kicking accuracy and field generalship, and Simms with an amazingly fast pair of feet.

The offense that G. W. will pit against the invading host probably will be the strongest yet constructed by Coach Pixlee. Johnny Fenlon, whose throwing arm was injured in the Alabama game, is once more able to toss 'em as of old, while Chris Doose, hard-plunging full back, has recovered fully from a back ailment. Nig McCarver, sensational half back, is not, however, in the best physical shape, the result of the bruising battle with William and Mary.

255,000 Try to See Buenos Aires Soccer

Buenos Aires, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—River Plata won the Argentine professional soccer football championship today, defeating Independiente, 3 to 0. A crowd of 55,000 persons watched the struggle, while another 200,000 milled around outside the field.

Police twice were forced to fire over the heads of those outside to keep order, but even so, three persons were wounded by shots fired from among the spectators outside the playing field. Stones and bottles were thrown freely.

Shorts Invade

Capital grid fans will get an eyeful of the latest in football uniforms Thursday when the Oklahoma eleven plays G. W. The uniform weighs only 7¼ pounds. Dick Sims is the young man above.

NAVY SHOWS IMPROVED GAME

Play Against Irish Raises Hopes for Army Victory.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 20.—There is general satisfaction in naval football circles over the showing of the Midshipmen in their game against the powerful Notre Dame outfit Saturday, and the feeling prevails that the Tars, coming along steadily during the last three weeks, will be at their real peak when they face their traditional rivals, the West Point Cadets, on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, December 3.

In fact, Rip Miller's proteges fully measured up to expectations of those in close touch with the local football situation, for while there is always a chance of the under dog snaring victory, the Notre Dame triumph by two touchdowns was just about the minimum estimate made in all quarters.

Navy Shows Improved Game.

Statistics show that the Irish greatly outrushed the Naval team, but when it is considered that they registered their scores through the medium of forward passes, coupled with the gallant stand made by the Middies late in the game by twice halting the foe within a few feet of the coveted goal, the caliber of the Annapolis eleven is better appreciated. These instances were but additional demonstrations that Navy's defense has been far superior to its offense throughout the season.

Navy went out to win Saturday's battle, if possible, not, however, making any sacrifices in view of the coming interservice struggle, and a study

Giants Inject Old Fight To Win

"Mara Day" Success as 30,000 Watch Packers Lose, 6-0.

Two Bands Help to Put Over Big Game; Fat Man Stars.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.
Special to The Washington Post.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Nov. 20.—This was Tim Mara Day at the Polo Grounds, and the New York Giants came through for the Grand Old Man of the boxoffice with a 6-to-0 victory over the Green Bay Packers, said to be the greatest football team in the country, who had not been defeated in nine previous games this year. There were two bands in the ball yard, a double portion of band, to sentimentalize with apppropriate songs, including "Three Cheers for Harvard: To Hell With Yale!" "Far Above Cayuga's Waters," and "The Sidewalks of New York," which seems to be the alma mater song of the Giants.

One band came from Manhattan College, a Catholic school which has been taking up football in a serious way under Chick Meehan and wondering how long this sort of thing has been going on. The other band represented a Jewish orphanage, and was strictly sedentary, whereas the Manhattan band marched about the field during the intermission behind a drum major in a fuzzy white shako as big as an ashcan. The Manhattan band seems to be advanced far beyond the Manhattan football team, being pretentious enough right now for a good Western Conference team, and there is some doubt as to whether they jeopardize their amateur standing as a college football band by horning and evoluting for a professional football magnate.

30,000 Pleased by Exhibition.

However that may be, both the football team and the band covered themselves with credit and not a little honest alime from a churned up baseball lot and the patrons, about 30,000 in number, including the honoraries of pass customers, evinced great satisfaction. The goal posts were not dismantled at the conclusion however, and this failure pointed out an oversight on the part of the management. They have hired cheer leaders from time to time and today a poet laureate bobbed up in the literature of the official program (price 15 cents) with a new Alma Mater song, dedicated to Tim Mara, entitled, "My Song." But nobody had thought to hire any snake-dancers to celebrate the victory nor any house-wreckers to tear down the goal posts.

The football field was still very gooey from the rain which marred the college games all over the East on Saturday, but the Giants, as they fought for their Grand Old Man, Mr. Mara, the A. A. Stagg of professional football in New York, were amazingly agile and held their feet much better than the Packers.

They outgained the Packers from scrimmage 110 yards to 55, and they completed seven of their forward passes whereas the Green Bay team tried sixteen, and finished only five. Along the line, notwithstanding a great preponderance of meat, the Packers were frequently pushed around by the more intelligent Giant athletes, who were playing their last

Few Sectional Crowns Still Undecided

East Boasts Colgate, Pitt, Brown, Army as Contenders.

Irish-Trojan Game on Dec. 10 Important to Race.

By HERBERT W. BARKER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Sectional titles in half the Nation's eight major conferences had been decided definitely today, but arguments over the mythical national championship rage more furiously than ever.

With some slight trepidation, however, the suggestion is ventured that when and if the dispute is satisfactorily settled, the nomination will go to one of a group including Southern California, Michigan, Auburn, Pitt, Army, Notre Dame, and either Brown or Colgate, depending upon the outcome of their Thanksgiving Day game at Providence.

Several of these are certain to be eliminated in the next two or three weeks. Southern California, in addition to a conference game with Washington, must play Notre Dame, December 10, two weeks after the Ramblers clash with Army. Pitt, conqueror of both Army and Notre Dame but tied by Ohio State and Nebraska, still has the Stanford hurdle to vault. Brown and Colgate should cut the list by one in their meeting this week. Michigan has completed its schedule and Auburn has only South Carolina on the list.

Some Conference Titles Decided.

Conference races already decided show the following new or repeating champions:

Big Ten—Michigan.
Big Six—Nebraska.
Rocky Mountain—Utah.
Missouri Valley—Oklahoma A. and M.

The leaders in the other four conference or sectional races, not yet definitely decided, were:

Southwst—Texas Christian.
Pacific—Southern California and University of California at Los Angeles.
South—Auburn.
East—Brown, Colgate, Pitt, Army.

Yesterday's firing, one of the last big salvos of the waning season, offered few surprises except in the scores, as all the leading favorites won, although in some instances by much narrower margins than had been expected. Weather conditions—a driving rain in the East and intense cold in the Midwest—were responsible for some of these surprises.

Michigan, coholder of the Big Ten title with Northwestern and Purdue a year ago, assumed sole ownership of the 1932 crown by beating Minnesota, 3 to 0, on Harry Newman's placement field goal. Purdue, unbeaten but tied by Northwestern, wound up in second place, routing Indiana, 25 to 7, in its final contest. Ohio State also called upon a field goal to whip Illinois, 3 to 0, but Wisconsin trounced Chicago, 18 to 7, and Northwestern ran up a 44-to-6 count on Iowa.

Nebraska Supreme In Big Six.

Nebraska, although it still has Missouri to play, clinched the Six Six championship with a 5-to-0 victory over Oklahoma. Kansas upset Kansas State, 19 to 0, in another conference game, while Iowa State defeated Drake, of the Missouri Valley group, 34 to 13.

Utah swept to its fifth successive Rocky Mountain title as the Indians turned back the Colorado Aggies, 16 to 0. Brigham Young, beating the Utah Aggies, 18 to 6, clinched second place.

Notre Dame, traveling the comeback road after its defeat by Pitt, ran into a stout-hearted Navy defense, but won, 12 to 0, yet the East countered this intersectional defeat with Fordham's 8-to-6 triumph over Oregon State. The Midwest chalked up two other intersectional victories as Marquette whipped Washington and Jefferson, 6 to 0, and Creighton handed Wyoming a 30-to-0 lacing, but suffered one reverse as Gonzaga beat South Dakota, 12 to 0.

The Eastern program was featured by Yale's great show of strength in overpowering Harvard, 19 to 0. Pitt and Army eked out one touchdown wins, the former beating Carnegie Tech 6 to 0, and the Army turning back West Virginia Wesleyan, 7 to 0, but Columbia and Holy Cross found the muddy going too much of a handicap and played scoreless ties with Syracuse and Manhattan, respectively. Temple's undefeated record was marred by Villanova, 7 to 0, and Lafayette climaxed an otherwise dismal

STRICKLER AND PHELPS TO CLASH IN PORTNER'S FEATURE

D. C. Fighter Aiming for Revenge

30 Rounds Scheduled at Alexandria's Show Tonight.

By DAVE HERMAN.

TWO rugged fighters, Cowboy Owen Phelps, of Mesa, Arizona, and Billy Strickler, the Terminal Bulldog, will scrap over the ten-round route in the main bout on tonight's boxing program at Portner's Arena for the benefit of the Alexandria Day Nursery.

Possessing a dangerous left that has proved the stumbling block of many a good light-heavy and middleweight fighter, Phelps goes into the ring with a victory to his credit over the District puncher. Back in May, the Cowboy defeated Strickler in an eight-round go at Portner's. Ring experts, however, were loud in their praise of the Bulldog's strong finish.

Phelps' manager, Jimmy Erwin, has indicated that following tonight's match he will put in a claim for his boxer for the middleweight championship of the South. Erwin also announced that if Vince Dundee's manager refused to concede to a return bout, he would go so far as "to claim the American title for the Cowboy."

Strickler in Best Shape.

Strickler, reported to be in fine fettle, recently whipped Jimmy DeCapua at Portner's in a six-rounder, proving himself a terrific mixer. He also holds victories over Joe Finazzo, Al Treanor, Bill Fienster and Rex King. In his three bouts here, Phelps lost to Bob Godwin and Vince Dundee, and won from Strickler. However, the Cowboy has jousted with some of the finest scrappers in the country.

Thirty rounds are on the card. There will be one eight and three fours in addition to the main duel.

A local favorite, Roddy Davis, who has acquired the title of The Capital Limited, and Jimmy Tramberia, of Baltimore, will clash in the semiwind-up of eight rounds. Davis has not fought since he beat up Patsy Lewis at Portner's a few weeks ago. Tramberia has been in the spotlight in the Monumental City and comes to Alexandria hailed as a greatly improved fighter.

Davis Seeks Tenth Straight.

Davis, one of the finest lightweight prospects in Washington, is determined to hang up his tenth straight triumph. His manager, Harry Kid Groves, has pointed out that three Baltimore boxers have attempted to take Davis' measure in the past three months, but each has failed.

Henry Irving, whose looping left-hand swing reminds fans so much of good old Popeye, will meet Whitey Saylor in the opening preliminary. Jesse Belt, of Washington, will take on Johnny Koles, of Baltimore, while Bob Lowry, of Washington, will oppose Jake Shearers, of Baltimore. Each bout is scheduled for four rounds, the first starting at 8:30 o'clock.

BOXING BITS SELECTIONS.

Phelps to beat Strickler. Davis to beat Tramberia. Lowry to beat Shearers. Belt to beat Koles. Irving to beat Saylor.

EAGLE PREPS SCORE.

Nelligan's 90-yard return of a kick-off for a touchdown featured the Anacostia Eagle Prep's 37-0 victory over the Ramblers in a one-sided game yesterday. Loughrey and Adlung starred in the winning back field.

SANTA CLARA WINS.

Kezar Stadium, San Francisco, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Santa Clara's Broncos defeated the San Francisco Olympic Club, 12 to 0 today on a fog-bound field where the ball was almost obscured from view in the last quarter.

A crowd of 3,000 saw the final Sunday game of the season here. Broncos scored touchdowns in the second and last periods.

DEAR AL: BOWIE RACE TRACK.

Mr. G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, horse owner and gentleman jockey, was called to the judges' stand Saturday after riding his Garden Message to defeat and informed that he must report along with the rest of the riders an hour before post time and stay in the jockeys' room. Bostwick, it is said, barely had time to dress before riding his 2-year-old. However, officials spared Bostwick the embarrassment of calling him up when he weighed out, by waiting until he donned his street clothes. A familier turf name seems destined to be missing soon. On December 3, William Dupont, owner of the Foxcatcher Farms, will dispose of his holdings which include White Clover II, winner of the Bowie Handicap at Pimlico. Kay Spence, who has been training a division of the Audley Farm Stable for eleven years, has left the employment of B. B. Jones, owner of the string. Spence developed, among others, Princess Doreen, Gallant Knight, Easter Stockings and Rockminster. Spence is now gathering a stable for winter racing. BILL.

FIRST RACE—ST. OMER was a well-meant juvenile the last time out and but for bad racing luck which shuffled the son of Blondin back to ninth position soon after the break might have taken it all. The off track today should not hinder this fellow. CRUISING has been threatening, but starts from a rail position in the heaviest going. LEAROYD for the show.

SECOND RACE - ILCHESTER threatens to draw Buddy Hanford as a rider today and this pair will have a lot to say about which way this purse goes. This one is perfectly at home on the slow track promised. BOHEMIAN GROVE was overboard in class the last time and figures here. SKY HAVEN, though cheap, can get third.

THIRD RACE—PENNATE failed me once, but I'm giving him another chance. Figures to beat these under the conditions. BRAVE AND BOLD looks like the one to do the pressing. KAI-FINN showed a flash of speed recently that leads me to believe that this one may wake up. Certainly was a smart 4-year-old maiden at Marlboro.

FOURTH RACE — GLASTONBURY looks like the class here. Was a long time showing his best but that's behind him now. RISQUE has a habit of providing a lot of battle. HYMAN may take third. MORSEL may not be sore as I have been informed.

FIFTH RACE—I'm going to try to make Johnny Gilbert ride me a winner in this. He probably will have the mount on BURNING FEET. This one takes off some weight today after a fine effort. Watch out. FINGAL is always dangerous, even without Mack Garner. CAESAR'S GHOST did his best on this sort of track.

SIXTH RACE—WISHING STAR'S victories in claiming races over $2,500 are few and far between but, going back to that mud race at Pimlico, I see no reason why this fellow can't step down for us. STORM appears the one to beat. PENCADER was ridden the long way the last time. A change in the route would make this one a serious contender.

Walker-Dekuh Start Training for Fight

Los Angeles, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Mickey Walker and Arthur Dekuh, Italian heavyweight, signed for a ten-round bout at the Olympic Club December 6, began preparations today for active training. Walker's manager, Jack Kearns, said his fighter would train at Soper's Ranch, where he placed himself in condition for his middleweight title scrap with Ace Hudkins three years ago.

Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, will be on the same card, meeting either Ceferino Garcia, Veal Whitehead or Tommy Herman.

McAfee, Nat Pitcher, Is Hunting in Georgia

Special to The Washington Post.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Pitcher Bill McAfee, who won six out of seven games after being obtained by the Washington Nationals from the Boston Braves via the draft route, is now en route to his birth place, Smithville, Ga., on a hunting trip.

Accompanying the Nats' promising right-handed rookie are his dad, William F., sr., and his brother, Howell. The trio expects to bring down its share of quail, doves and ducks.

Montgomery Captains 1933 Columbia Team

New York, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Clifford Montgomery, ace quarter back, today was elected captain of the Columbia University Football Team. He is 21, a junior and hails from Motrona Heights, Pa., near Pittsburgh. The Lions' record this season, the best in 25 years of football at Columbia, is due largely to Montgomery's ball-carrying ability, his passing and punting.

MOHAWK PREPS-MULHALL TIE.

Mohawk Preps and Mulhall played to a 6-to-6 stalemate at Ballston yesterday. The Preps scored on a pass from Barnes to Edwards, while Nick Smallwood fan 45 yards to tally for the Virginians. Lyon Park's Lions will be the next Mulhall opponent.

VIRGINIA AVE. SOCCERISTS WIN, 5-0

Losing Rosedales to Protest; 4 Other Good Games.

VIRGINIA AVENUE took the lead in the Recreation League yesterday with a surprise 5-to-0 victory over Rosedale's strong soccer aggregation. The startling part of the victory was the size of the score, as the critics figured the teams even before playing time.

Columbia Heights Grays moved into the lead in the Capital City League by downing Rockville, 3 to 1, while the erstwhile leaders, Marlboro, were idling. The Grays now have 8 points to their credit to 6 claimed by the Prince Georges County lads.

Park View won a clean, hard-fought contest from New York Avenue, 2 to 1, to keep in the running for the Recreation League title. Both the Dux-Raymond and the Bloomingdale-Chevy Chase contests had to be called because of unplayable fields.

Columbia Heights Blacks Beat Brandywine.

Columbia Heights Blacks earned a 5-to-1 decision over an improved Brandywine eleven and the battling Gaithersburg squad whitewashed Concord, 5 to 0, in the other Capital City League games.

Johnny Malloch, jr., manager of the Rosedale eleven, registered a protest after the game with Virginia Avenue on the grounds that Referee Dixon had deprived his team of a goal and awarded a penalty kick, contrary to the rules which are to the effect that the unoffending team shall not suffer by receiving a penalty kick.

Eastern Scorers Lead By Bush, Mass. State

New York, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—While Lou Bush, of Massachusetts State, was being held scoreless for the first time this season in his closing game, Joe Kershalla, of West Liberty State Teachers College in West Virginia, staged a remarkable scoring feat against Cedarville yesterday to take second place among the Eastern football point-getters.

Kershalla lugged the ball over for eleven touchdowns and added 5 extra points, scoring 71 points. He had made one touchdown previously, giving him 77 points for the season, just half Bush's total. Bush wound up his campaign with 19 touchdowns for 114 points.

Pat Foley, Fordham Grid Coach Aid, Dies

New York, Nov. 20 (A.P.).—Frank (Pat) Foley, assistant line coach of the Fordham Football Team, died today in the university hospital. He was operated on last Thursday for appendicitis.

Foley was graduated at Fordham in 1930. He played tackle on the varsity team in his junior and senior years, and was appointed to the coaching staff last year.

PUNTING MAY LAND OLIVER C. U. BERTH

Sophomore Likely to Start Against Loyola Saturday.

TOMMY OLIVER, Catholic U.'s sensational sophomore full back, whose phenomenal punting stole the show during C. U.'s Friday night stand against Duquesne, probably will be elevated to a starting status Saturday afternoon when "Dutch" Bergman's "Flying Cardinals" terminate their 1932 football campaign against Baltimore Loyola. They clash at Griffith Stadium, 2:15 o'clock.

Eager to see more of the talented full back's toe work, Bergman last night was considering a shift whereby Capt. "Ripper" Sheary, playing his fast game for C. U., will be started as a half or quarter back, permitting Oliver to perform at his accustomed position.

Oliver Called Great Prospect.

Oliver, Bergman declares, is one of the likeliest porspects yet uncovered during his regime at C. U.

"Washingtonians will wait many a day before they see as prettily launched and skillfully placed punts as Tom got off against Duquesne," Bergman insisted last night. "To further enhance his value, he blocks well, is sound on defense and can plunge.

"I'm highly hopeful that Oliver will develop into a capable successor to one of the finest athletes and brainiest football players I've ever had the pleasure to develop, "Bus" Sheary."

Although Loyola's eleven is below its standard of a year ago, a rousing scrap may be expected when the mixing starts. Spurred on by traditional rivalry of long standing, the Baltimore machine will make its mightiest effort to smash through with an upset.

game of the home season, and wished to gain a victory as a testimonial to their employer and Arnold Herber, the packers' star back, was thrown for several losses as he meditated far behind the scrimmage line, waiting for a catcher who could receive a pass.

Fat Man Helps Packers.

Having been advertised as the greatest football team on earth the Packers were a slight disappointment, except to those loyal patrons of Tim Mara, who chose to believe that the Packers were every bit as great as their billing claimed, but that the Giants were even greater.

There was a very fat man playing tackle for the Packers, a Mr. Hubbard, once of Monmouth College, if there is such a college, who stopped many of the Giants' rushes by merely refusing to move out of the way. He covers several acres of ground standing still and when he lies down his effective area as an obstruction is doubled. He usually laid down and the Giants would come along, interference and all, to crash into this mass, glance off and drop from the shock. But there were also a few times when he did not move out of the way of his own backs and they recoiled from their impacts with his inert, immovable mass like birdshot off the side of a dreadnaught and got up holding their heads dizzily. Finally, at one stage when they had the ball, the Packers got him out of there because they were using miles of yardage trying to run plays around him.

The Giants came through for the Grand Old Man who keeps them out of the ranks of the unemployed just before the end of the first half. They were on their 10-yard line one minute and over the Packers' goal a minute later, beginning with a punt to Johnny Blood, the Packers' half back, which popped out of his arms about midfield. Grant recovered for the Giants and a pass moved them along to the Packers' 34-yard line. Three plays from that point gave them a net gain of 2 yards and on the fourth down McBryde went over to his right to throw a pass diagonally to his left, which Flaherty caught and carried over from the 5-yard line.

Giants Have Some Spirit.

The victory was won as simply as that and was defended throughout the second half by the superior ball club of the Giants, who had the personal as well as the partisan sympathy of the attendance because they seemed such little boys by comparison.

The turnstiles recorded a pay count with the tickets selling at $2 per copy and the day ended pleasantly for all including even the Packers, who must certainly be allowed to lose one now and again. And, any way, they had this excuse that they were playing against a fanatic team, fired with the will to win for their employer; it is one thing to fight for a college, but a man who has a job these days has something real to fight for.

Marion A. C. Wins, 7-2 To Clinch Unlimited Title

85-Yard March to Touchdown in Last Period Defeats Maryland A. C. Eleven; Back Finally Scores.

IN ONE of the most interesting and hard-fought sandlot games played here in many, many moons, the Marion Athletic Club eleven yesterday clinched the crown in the unlimited section of the Independent League by downing the Maryland Athletic Club, 7 to 2. One of the largest league crowds of the season packed Gonzaga Field to see the fray.

It was a real battle from start to finish, with the ultimate winners trailing until the final minute of play. The Marylanders scored a safety shortly after play started, and managed to hold this small margin until the final quarter. Then the Marions suddenly started a drive of 85 yards which ended in a touchdown less than a minute before the final whistle sounded.

Marion Back Scores.

This score, by the way, was the first hung up by a Marion back in five games played. The Marions won the first game when a lineman blocked a punt for a touchdown, took their second when a blocked punt was turned into a safety, won their next two on touchdowns resulting from blocked punts, and captured their fifth game on a brace of safeties due to the alien kicker being forced to bungle his job.

Shortly after the game started, the Marions were on the Maryland 5-yard stripe and a bad pass from center eluded Manatt and he was downed behind his own goal. The ball was mostly in Maryland territory during the remainder of the half, but the Marions never were in scoring position.

An intercepted pass stopped the Marylanders on their foes' 5-yard line early in the third period, and play was in midfield from then until the last five minutes of play, when the Marions struck. After gaining the ball on a punt on their 15-yard strip, they marched 85 yards on a series of small but steady gains, except for a 30-yard pass which carried them over the midfield line. Manatt and Hoff did the ball-carrying, with the first-named finally crashing over from the 1-yard mark.

Maryland's Passes Intercepted.

Maryland's aerial attack started off well, but it proved a boomerang at times, as seven of its heaves were intercepted. Marion's line,

Terry's Grid Team Ties Brookland, 0-0

Southwest Eleven Stopped on 1-Yard Line; Play Again Later.

Playing on a muddy field, Terry's Service Team, 150-pound city champions, battled to a scoreless tie with the Brookland Boys Club in what was to have been the deciding game of the Independent League championship. A large crowd witnessed the game.

Both teams resorted to kicking games, waiting for a break, rather than run the risk of carrying the ball and fumbling. Play for the most part was confined to midfield.

Terry's reached Brookland's 1-yard line in the second period, aided by the latter team's fumble and a 15-yard penalty for holding. But Brookland made a game stand in the shadow of its goal posts and the Southwest eleven failed to score.

The two teams performed in sterling fashion and played almost flawless ball, a tribute to the fine coaching they have received.

Following the game the rival managers agreed to meet at a later date to decide the title.

D. C. Girl Hockeyists Beat Baltimoreans

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 20.—Washington girls' hockey eleven did the unexpected today by defeating Baltimore's second squad, 6 to 3, in the Southeastern tournament on the Bryn Mawr School field. The Capital team blanked their opponent, 4 to 0, in the first half. Betty Garber was the big shot for the invaders, three tallies being credited to her. The last of these was scored immediately before the final whistle blew.

While not a single Washingtonian was picked today on the first sectional team, Agnes Rodgers, of the Capital, was chosen for the second group. Margaret Johnston, Washington, was selected as a reserve for the forward line.

Senators-Irvingtons Battle to 0-to-0 Tie

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 20.—A tight battle developed between Irvington and the Senators, of Washington, this afternoon, when the return clash between these teams resulted in a scoreless tie. Upon the occasion of their previous meeting this season, the District outfit snared a 6-to-2 decision in a game that Irvington supporters felt failed to settle the question of supremacy. Today's return clash failed to prove the local contention.

Irvington was in scoring territory several times, but always failed to get over with the ball. Especially was this so in the final quarter when the local outfit advanced into the shadows of the visitors' goal posts. But it was one of those days when each could get so far but no farther. The defensive work on both sides was tight and efficient when danger threatened. Both clubs put up a spirited contest, with Ryscavage, of the locals, playing especially well. Andreas, a sub back, negotiated a nice sweeping offtackle run for Irvington, but despite some brilliant individual effort on both sides, nothing happened.

Meridians Beaten By Fraters, 13-0

Alexandrians Win Fifth in Row as Turner, Kessler, Scafide Star.

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 20.—Two power plays, one in the first period and the other in the third quarter, netted the Alexandria Fraters their fifth win of the campaign as they tripped the Washington Meridians, 13-0, here today.

Jim Haywood, half back, sidestepped through the Meridians' left tackle in the first quarter for the touchdown, after his team had placed the leather on the D. C. lads' 17-yard stripe.

In the third period the Fraters polled their final 6 points. A long pass, McMenamin to Cabell, netted 35 yards. Two line plays put the pigskin on the Meridians' 12-yard stripe and Gensmer, husky full back, then went off tackle for 17 yards to register.

Brentwood Hawks Beat Hopkins, 6 to 0

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 20.—Brentwood Hawks defeated Hopkins Furniture football team this afternoon on Haydon's Field, 6 to 0. The game was a stubbornly contested affair from the opening whistle.

Midway of the third period, the Hawks started their winning drive from midfield. Dashes by Herbert and W. Felner brought the ball to the Hopkins 20-yard line. After being held for 3 downs, W. Felner shot a pass to Herbert, who carried the ball to the 6-yard line. On a double reverse, Bonbrest skirted left end for the score.

Hopkins threatened to score on three different occasions, once driving to its opponents' 3-yard line, where it was forced to relinquish the ball on downs.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

BY determining just what elements and compounds are necessary to the growth of plant life, in addition to water and carbon dioxide of the air, Prof. W. F. Gericke, of the University of California, Berkeley, Calif., is able to grow vegetables and flowers—eliminating entirely the use of soil in his garden.

Prof. Gericke dissolves his "plant food" in water, in which the seeds are planted on a layer of sawdust or any similar substance. By regulating the strength of the plant food solution in the water, Prof. Gericke can regulate, to a large extent, the growth of the plants.

A vanished race of agricultural people, known today as the Canal Builders, because of their vast irrigation systems, once populated Arizona more densely than the people of today. Students of the ancient race agree that more people lived in what is now Arizona in the time of Christ than were listed in the 1930 census.

The Canal Builders, forced by necessity to reclaim desert lands for their livelihood, constructed an irrigation system the extent of which surprises modern irrigation experts.

Instead of the usual practice of getting the fly to come to the trap, the reverse was true in the fly-gun patented in 1911 by which the trap was shot at the fly. The gun's barrel contained a cylindrical trap, which, when shot at a fly, would close over it, catching the fly alive.

THE ONCE OVER

H. I. PHILLIPS

THE STADIUM JANITOR'S TROUBLES.

"I'LL certainly be a great break for me if prohibition is repealed," said the football stadium janitor wistfully, as he peered around the bottle-scarred premises after the Saturday classic. "Just look at those empties. There must be acres of 'em."

* * * *

"Cleaning up after a college football game ain't what it was before prohibition," said the janitor. "Of course, there was drinking then, but the women and children didn't take part in it.

* * * *

"And we had very little bottle trouble. The old grads and the young ones, for that matter, used to think that a flask would carry them through the most exciting contest. Now and then some old soak would drag out a half-pint bottle and leave it around the bowl after the game, but when we cleaned up we wouldn't get enough empty bottles to fill a gunnysack.

* * * *

"But today, oh, baby! Say, if you walked around any college football arena after a football game in your bare feet you would get cut to pieces the first dozen yards!

* * * *

"It takes a fleet of trucks to cart away the bottles tossed around by the sweet young things and their bibulous escorts. If you want to see real bottle babies, you want to get an eyeful of Miss America as represented at the gridiron classics between the halves. I've been around a lot, but I never saw girls of 18 swig out of quart and pint bottles until the last ten years of college football. In the last three or four years they haven't even asked for paper cups.

* * * *

"We sweep up from 5,000 to 15,000 pint and quart bottles after every game, and now and then we brush up a group of serious drinkers. It's very hard work. I figure that repeal will bring about a great reform. The way I dope it out is that these young people don't really like whisky; they do it because it's smart.

* * * *

"Once drinking becomes legal and a matter of personal desire, there won't be an kick in carting a load of raw alcohol to a football game. The desire to be able to follow the second half of a football game and understand what's going on will return and conditions will get back to normal.

* * * *

"There'll always be a few bottles to be swept up after a game, but it won't be a major undertaking requiring a big staff of whitewings, a fleet of motor trucks and the constant operation of an emergency dressing station for lacerated feet," concluded the Stadium Janitor.

Neighbors Call Police; Man Found Gas Victim

Neighbors detecting the odor of gas coming from the home of John Klozaska, 33, at 904 Eighth street northwest, yesterday called Policeman S. F. Smith, of the First Precinct, who discovered Klozaska unconscious in the kitchen of the house with gas flowing from the burners of a range.

Policeman Smith gave the man artificial respiration until members of the Fire Rescue Squad arrived. Klozaska was treated at Emergency Hospital and allowed to go home.

Film Actor Lauds Washington Girls

Walter Scott Kolk, Visiting Here, Say They Surpass Hollywood Type.

"I think Washington girls are much more feminine and charming than the girls of Hollywood," Walter Scott Kolk, motion picture actor, said yesterday in an interview.

As a whole, the girls of the Capital are much more attractive and appealing to the male than the Hollywood product, as they have not got that cold under surface which is prevalent in the young woman who hopes some day to become a picture star, as have those in the capital of the motion picture industry.

Mr. Kolk, who arrived in Washington several days ago, is well on his way to stardom. He played with Tallulah Bankhead in "My Sin," in "All Quiet on the Western Front" and other films.

Man Is Held in Hit-Run Auto Death of Father

Harry Goldberger, 35, was charged by police tonight with being the driver of an automobile which struck and killed his father, Kalman Goldberger, 70, and then sped away.

The driver was arrested several hours later on charges of careless operation of a motor vehicle so as to cause loss of life and evading responsibility.

Police said the elder Goldberger was walking along the edge of the highway when he was struck from behind by his son's car.

CATHOLIC LEADERS DISCUSS EDUCATION IN RADIO PROGRAM

"Intellectual Mission of the Church" Is Nation-Wide Broadcast's Topic.

Outstanding leaders of the Catholic Church, assembled in all sections of the country, took part in a discussion of "The Intellectual Mission of the Church in America," which was broadcast from the campus of Catholic University yesterday between 6:15 and 7 p. m.

A large group of alumni of Catholic University were assembled throughout the country in different cities to listen to the program.

A number of the speakers on the program delivered their talks in cities other than Washington, the remote control facilities of the Columbia raido chain being used.

Message From Pope Read.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, who is chancellor of the university, was the first speaker. He read a message from the Pope through Cardinal Pacelli, which said in part:

"How deeply the holy father, from the very beginning of his pontificate, has interested himself in the Catholic University of America, everyone knows. Like his illustrious predecessors, he was determined that the university should surpass all other institutions of higher education in America. No wonder, then, that he has approved and furthered the zealous endeavors in behalf of this great work put forth by the bishops, the chancellors and rectors whom you have succeeded in office, and, as well, by all our faithful Catholic people.

"And now, the august pontiff whose voice we have heard time and again spurring all to the achievement day by day of greater and better things, rejoices with you in the remarkable success which so far has been attained, and exhorts you most earnestly to persevere in your splendid undertaking."

Cardinal O'Connell Speaks.

In his talk on the university, William Cardinal O'Connell, dean of the American Hierachy and Archbishop of Boston, discussed the efforts of the modern world to find a substitute for God. He stated that the Catholic Church always rejoices in progress.

"In spite of the turmoil which still agitates the world, the pursuit of knowledge has not slackened. New facts are continually brought to light by the physical sciences. Old errors are corrected. The laws of nature are more fully understood. The forces of nature are more completely engaged in the service of men. In this progress the Caholic Church rejoices."

His Eminence Patrick Cardinal Hayes joined in the broadcast from his residence in New York. Cardinal Hayes said in part:

"Since it was my happy privilege to spend several years as a student at the Catholic University of America, I have followed with great interest its program. The increasing recognition given its scholarship, the growth in the number of its graduate students and its many publications in the field of theology, philosophy, canon law and science have excited the admiration of all Catholic leaders.

C. U. Rector is Heard.

"To my fellow alumni in the various cities throughout the continent, I wish to extend my best wishes and I wish to assure the faculty and students of the university that it will always have a prominent place in my prayers and interests."

The Right Rev. James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University, said in part:

"The challenge of intellectual service that our university may render has been presented in no uncertain terms. We accept that challenge; we pledge ourselves to serve devotedly the interests of God and Nation."

Archbishop Murray, of St. Paul, observed "faith in God, obedience to His commands, loyal observance of our country's laws" are the essentials of upright living, continuing:

"These also are the fundamental virtues which we seek to develop in those who come after us. * * * And the means of that transmission is Catholic education."

Cites School Safeguard.

Citing as an example that medicine seeks to prevent as well as heal, Archbishop Murray added "the school safeguards the bodily health of its pupils," and asked "why should it not do as much for their spiritual welfare?"

"This precisely is the chief object of our Catholic schools," he continued. "To attain it more and more is the constant aim of our teachers."

Archbishop Glennon, of St. Louis, said whatever loosened home ties "strikes a blow at the whole structure of society."

"Rob marriage of its sacred character and you open the way to animal promiscuity," he said. "Make its bond an affair of whim or caprice * * * and there follows * * * a stench and putridity of scandal. * * *"

The Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Coadjutor Archbishop of San Francisco, explaining the relationship between university instruction and governmental law, said the Catholic Church "lays upon her members the obligation to respect and observe whatever the powers of earth decree."

Following the broadcast members of the alumni and faculty here met in McMahon Hall auditorium at the school, where a special banquet was served. Clarence E. Martin, president of the American Bar Association, was guest of honor and spoke.

Two Hurt as Car Overturns.

Injured when their automobile overturned on Defense highway near the District line last night, Edward Bristoe, colored, 28, of 208 R street northwest, and John Green, also colored, of 1672 Cramer street northwest, were taken to Casualty Hospital last night suffering from severe lacerations and bruises. Green received a possible skull fracture.

Policeman's Home Robbed.

E. J. Conture, a policeman stationed at the Traffic Bureau, yesterday reported that thieves had entered his home at 2301 Thirteenth street northwest, and had stolen his wife's pocketbook containing $16 in cash and a check for $5. Conture said the purse was later found in the rear yard, but its contents were missing.

Velvet Bent Grass Best For Greens, Golfers Say

Johnny Farrell, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., pictured testing the putting potentialities of an experimental golf green. A mechanical putter used in tests is also shown.

Farrell and Burke Among Those Who Indorse Arlington Carpet.

The okay of a large group of the Nation's outstanding golfers has been given to velvet bent grass as the most desirable carpet for golf greens.

Over in Arlington County, Va., where the Agriculture Department maintains an experimental farm for testing numerous grasses for various purposes, the United States Golf Association has grown in conjunction therewith a group of greens with several types of grass.

All nationally known golfers and others not so well known have been asked, when passing through Washington, to try the greens and indicate their choice. Velvet bent received the highest score.

Among star linksmen who have given high approval of velvet bent grass for greens are Billy Burke, Willie Macfarlane and Johnny Farrell. Others who tested and okayed the same type of green were Horton Smith, Wiffy Cox, Johnny Golden and Tom Kerrigan.

The green laid with velvet bent, these golfers found, provides a carpet neither too fast nor too slow. The texture offers a true surface for putting, they said, and the color—a deep, soft green—appealed to all the players.

Dr. John Monteith, in charge of the green experimental work, said that all types of grass vary from season to season. Methods of disease control; improvements in soil structure and more effective fertilizer practices are reducing to a minimum the unfavorable effects of variations in climatic conditions.

U. S. WORKERS LOOK TO LABOR'S SESSION

Cincinnati Parley's Stand on Classification Awaited; Convenes Today.

With the opening of Congress but two weeks away, considerable interest is expected from Government employes in the American Federation of Labor convention which opens today at Cincinnati.

Government workers of the interdepartmental services will be represented by David B. Glass, first vice president of the American Federation of Government Employes, who will present their proposals on classification, retirement, and the economy act. Mr. Glass left by plane yesterday noon from Hoover airport to be in Cincinnati last night for preliminary conferences with labor leaders.

Federal employes are watching the A. F. of L. convention, particularly those belonging to the group that parted company with organized labor following the meeting at Vancouver a year ago when opposition was voted to the Lehlbach classification bill extending the job allocating plan to the field services.

"When the A. F. of L. opposed the Lehlbach bill it was because it included certain trade groups who do not wish to be classified and whose exclusion from classification was expressly directed by the Welch act," declared Mr. Glass, before leaving yesterday. "Because the A. F. of L. had taken issue with a particular legislative proposal concerning classification, opponents of organized labor have represented trade union leaders as being opposed to classification. Nothing could be further from the facts, for the A. F. of L. has supported classification since its inception, and the plan has received labor's support before and since the act of 1923."

Mr. Glass called attention to a section in the report of the A. F. of L. executive council strongly recommending convention support for the principle of classification. This portion of the report which will be submitted to the convention follows in part:

"The American Federation of Labor energetically supports the principle of classification and is thoroughly in favor of the enactment of classification legislation by the Congress of the United States, applicable to Government employes in both departmental and field service, exclusive of employes whose wages are or should be fixed by wage boards, or such class of crafts who do not desire it.

"The executive council is of the opinion that the field personnel should enjoy the same rights to classification and appeal as are accorded departmental employes and also the same pay for identical or similar work."

Navy Officer's Wife Accuses Cabman

Improper Advances Are Charged by Woman in Chevy Chase.

A warrant charging assault to a Washington taxi driver was sworn out last night by Mrs. Lisle J. Maxon, wife of Lieut. Lisle Maxon, United States Navy, of 4621 Hunt avenue, Chevy Chase, Md. The warrant was issued by Justice of the Peace Donald Canada, of Bethesda, Md. The cab driver, James B. Teele, of 744 Eighth street northwest, later surrendered to Maryland police and was released under bond of $100.

Mrs. Maxon charged Teele with making "improper advances." The advances, she alleges, were made one night early last week, when she hired his cab at Connecticut avenue and Rittenhouse street northwest. Last Thursday, Mrs. Maxon declared, she again happened to hire his cab, not knowing he was the same driver. She alleged that upon reaching her home, he once more made "improper advances."

Teele denies the charge.

But Mercury Is Scheduled to Resume Downward Path Tomorrow.

Yesterday's respite from cold weather is not scheduled to last long, for the weather man said last night that the mercury will start downward tomorrow. The forecast for today is fair and warmer, and fair and colder tomorrow.

The highest temperature reading yesterday was in San Diego, Calif., which registered 78 degrees, while the lowest, 10 above zero, was recorded in Duluth, Minn.

The highest reading yesterday for Washington was 46 degrees which was recorded at 4 p. m., while the lowest reading, 35 degrees was recorded at 8 a. m.

One year ago yesterday the citizens of Washington were not even thinking of overcoats. The highest temperature on November 20, 1931, was 75 degrees while the lowest was 59 degrees.

The accumulated excess of rainfall precipitation for Washington since January 1 was recorded as 7.33 inches while the precipitation since November 1 was registered as 4.77 inches.

Clarendon Youth, 12, Is Held Up in Zoo Park

Carl Blanchett, 12, of Clarendon, Va., reported to police yesterday that he was held up in the Zoo Park by two colored men.

The boy told police the men searched him and, finding nothing, ordered him to "be on his way." He said the incident occurred near the elephant house.

Man Hit by Car Suffers Fractured Collar Bone

Knocked down by an automobile as he attempted to cross the street near Connecticut avenue and Northampton street northwest, Karl Fenning, 52, of 5863 Chevy Chase Parkway, suffered a fractured collar bone last night.

He was treated by a private physician.

Woman, 67, Is Bruised When Struck by Truck

Mrs. Florie H. Barr, 67, of 5112 Connecticut avenue, was knocked down yesterday by a Washington Railway & Electric Co. truck driven by Luther A. Dodd, 52, of 1301 E street northeast.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for severe lacerations and bruises.

TRAFFIC TOLL TO DATE

Members of the Police Department were instructed to enforce the regulations prohibiting hitchhiking in the District in an order issued yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. Soliciting transportation from private vehicles, it was pointed out, causes annoyance to motorists, and some stop quickly and the vehicles behind them are forced to swerve out into the way of approaching traffic. A number of accidents have been caused in this manner, it was pointed out.

There have been 44 more deaths and 227 more injuries to date than during the corresponding period of 1931. The number of accidents has decreased by 420. The figures are:

	1931	1932
Deaths	69	113
Injuries	3,191	3,418
Accidents	7,405	6,985

"Be careful!"

PRICE OF GASOLINE OFF HERE, NEARBY OPERATORS TO ACT

Ways to Fight Competition Will Be Discussed at Clarendon Today.

With gasoline prices generally 2 cents per gallon lower on both high-test and straight varieties in the District, filling station operators in nearby Arlington County planned to meet today at Clarendon to discuss ways and means of combating competition of Washington operators.

High test gasoline in Washington was cut 2 cents at the pump by filling stations and wholesale distributors. This made a price generally of 18.2 and 16.2 cents for two types of high-test gasoline and 13.2 cents a gallon for straight gasoline. Some straight brands were selling at lower prices.

Two-Cent City Tax.

The District price included a 2-cent municipal tax and a 1-cent Federal levy. The Virginia prices included a 5-cent State tax and 1-cent Federal tariff.

One or two scattered stations in Arlington County last night were reported displaying District price signs, but they were decidedly in the minority.

Considering Action.

One large distributor of gasoline, reached last night by The Post, said:

"We are considering taking some action with regard to the Virginia prices, but so far no definite plan has been arrived at."

In Maryland gasoline at most stations was 1 cent different from the District and Virginia charges.

Dr. Wynne Will Speak To Tuberculosis Group

Dr. Shirley Wynne, commissioner of health of New York City, will be guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Tuberculosis Association next Monday night in the assembly room of the Chamber of Commerce Building.

Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, of the United States Public Health Department, and George Hastings, executive director of the White House Conference, will also be on the program. Mrs. E. R. Grant will preside.

Improved D. C. Housing Conditions Are Urged

Members of the National Park and Planning Commission went on record Saturday after the closing session of a convention, in favor of improved housing conditions in the District, and looking to elimination of alley dwellings and population shifts in some sections of the city.

A spokesman for the American Institute of Architects, Washington Chapter, outlined plans of his organization for achieving such an end. A major achievement put forward for fruition was the improvement of health conditions by the population shifts.

Thomas O'Connor, Fireman For 36 Years, Dies in Home

Battalion Chief Was 60; Native of Fairfax County.

THOMAS F. O'CONNOR.

Battalion Chief Thomas F. O'Connor, 60, of the District of Columbia Fire Department, brother of Edward O'Connor, who holds the same rank in the department, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 1151 North Capitol street, following a short illness.

Born in Fairfax County, Va., February 6, 1872, O'Connor was appointed to the departments in December, 1896, as a private. On July 1, 1904, he was appointed a captain and on September 6, 1918, he was promoted to battalion chief, which position he held until the time of his death.

He was presented with a ribbon decoration for his work at the Kahn's Warehouse fire at Eighth and D streets in January, 1925, and many times was commended by the Engineer Department for meritorious work. He was a specialist in Red Cross first-aid work and gas mask work and was organizer of the central training school in 1922 of the Fire Department.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Louise W. O'Connor, and two brothers, Edward and Charles O'Connor.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Wednesday at St. Aloysius Church, followed by interment in Congressional Cemetery.

JESUS' LEADERSHIP PASTOR'S SUBJECT

Rev. W. E. La Rue Continues Series of Talks on Great Texts of Bible.

"Jesus Christ came from the heights of the spiritual realm in order that He might open the door to all who would seek to rise to the heights of spiritual attainment," declared the Rev William E. La Rue, preaching yesterday at the Takoma Park Baptist Church.

The sermon was the third of a series of four sermons on "Great Texts of the Bible." It marked the eleventh anniversary of the pastor's service at the Takoma Park Church.

The Rev. Mr. La Rue said, in part: "Practically speaking, it is only because man's life has been touched by higher forces that he has risen above the animal plane. Wherever man is completely out of touch with the things that accompany salvation he dwells in the darkness of ignorance and, like the wild tribes, he is not far removed from the wild animals about him. Jesus taught that except a man be born from above he can not see the kingdom of God.

"But some men are so absorbed by the activities and the lure of this world below that they fail to sense the reality of the world above. There is reality in the spiritual as well as in the natural realm. For example, consider that intangible thing we call imagination. How poor would humanity be if nothing had aroused that faculty in man's life. The progress of civilization is chiefly due to the inspiration of imagination, and that is spiritual.

"Whenever Jesus has entered the life of humanity and has given His mysterious yet effective touch to the lives of men, they have been awakened to new life.

"He came that men might have life. The life that He offers may be received or rejected. Will we rise to the heights of the kingdom above us? Jesus says that to follow His leadership is to build upon an imperishable foundation that neither time nor circumstance can displace and human experience proves this to be true."

Inquests Today In 2 Car Deaths

Policeman and Woman Are Released for Appearance at Hearings.

Inquests will be held at 11:30 a. m. today in the death of Mrs. Mathilda King, 50, a cook at the home of Mrs. Sherman Flint, 3041 W street northwest, who was struck by an automobile in the 2900 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest Friday night, and in the fatal accident at Fifth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest, in which Mrs. Martha Henault, 70, of 517 L street northwest, was killed Saturday night.

Policeman William T. Schlosser, who told police he was driving the car which struck Mrs. King after police searched the city for 24 hours seeking the driver of the hit-and-run vehicle, was released on a $1,000 bond Saturday night to appear at the inquest today.

Mrs. Evelyn Mae Woodward, 20, of 3021 Channing street northeast, operator of the vehicle which fatally injured Mrs. Henault as she was crossing the street, also was released to appear at the coroner's hearing.

Man Found Unconscious From Effects of Gas

Edward S. Wohlfarth, 48, of 622 Sixth street northwest, was in a critical condition at Emergency Hospital last night from the effects of gas which escaped from a partly opened jet in his home yesterday.

He was discovered unconscious by fellow roomers in the house and taken to the hospital.

HUGUENOTS PRAISED IN PASTOR'S SERMON

Character of Nation Is Fixed by Spirit of Its People, Dr. Taylor Says.

"The character of a nation is determined by the spirit of its people and the value of the spirit is determined by the quality of the soul," said Dr. James H. Taylor, of the Central Presbyterian Church, preaching yesterday morning to the Huguenot Society of the District.

"There are certain things that contribute to the value of a people, the quality of the spirit, the depth of faith and the loyalty to convictions.

"The Huguenots of France were possessed of these qualities and their contribution to thought and life have been of immense value and power. They early espoused the doctrines of freedom and light and played an important part in the contest for religious liberty. The history of religious liberty can not be written without taking into account these people, who for 150 years were engaged in a momentous struggle.

"Great possessions of the spirit and life have come through long years of sacrifice and toil. We who are the beneficiaries of liberty do not realize often at what price our liberties were secured. We take them as a matter of course and for that reason lose our sense of value.

"Three great ideas dominated the Huguenot movements: Liberty of thought, liberty of faith and liberty of worship. These ideas were deeply rooted. There had percolated into France many of the doctrines of the reformation, but already these ideas had been for centuries in France.

"America today is under obligation to the Huguenot who, forced out of his own land by persecution, found a haven of refuge in America and helped to build a nation."

Richardson Testimonial To Be Given Dec. 9

The committee of the Federation of Civic Associations on banquet and testimonial to Dr. George H. Richardson, on his retirement as president of the federation, decided yesterday at a meeting held at the residence of Edward F. Harris, chairman, to give the testimonial on December 9 in the junior ballroom at the Masonic Temple, Tenth and U streets northwest.

Girl, 12, Wins Car; Food Show Closes

Officials Say Exhibition Was Most Successful; Records Broken.

Twelve-year-old Demitria Koutris, daughter of Thomas Koutris, proprietor of a restaurant at 612 Seventeenth street northwest, was awarded the Ford 8 sedan at the close of the Fifth annual food show in the Washington Auditorium last night.

Mr. Koutris said last night that, because of the fact that his daughter was rather young, he guessed he would have to learn how to drive the car so that it could be put to some use. He said he never owned or drove a car before, but the whole family is very happy over the unexpected prize.

Among the many other prizes awarded at the closing night of the food show last night was a vacuum cleaner, which was presented to Miss Mildred Eyer, of 2106 F street northwest. Officials of the show said it was the most successful held here and that all attendance records had been broken.

Railway Pioneer to Retire After 50 Years of Service

A year more than a half century's railroading will be marked today by John F. Robey, 70, of 515 Third street southeast, with his retirement from the position of assistant superintendent of motive power at the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad shops at Ivy City.

Mr. Robey, who has four sons and two daughters, the majority of whom live in Washington, was the center of a party Saturday night at his home in commemoration of his long career of railroading.

Beginning as a fireman with the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1881, Mr. Robey soon became an engineer. He was an engineer until 1907, during which period the Pennsylvania sold part of its Southern lines to the R. F. & P. Since 1907 Mr. Robey has occupied various stationary positions with the R. F. & P.

EUROPEAN SPEAKERS AGREE ARMAMENT IS WORLD'S WORST FOE

Dr. Philip of Lyons and Dr. Schultze of Berlin Talk on General Crisis.

Recognition by all nations of the interdependence of their people and governments, and the interrelation of the political, economic and commercial problems confronting them was declared to be the only clear path to a solution of present-day world troubles by both Dr. Andre Philip, of the University of Lyons, France, and Dr. F. Siegmund Schultze, of the University of Berlin, in their discussion of "France and Germany and World Peace" at the morning service in the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church yesterday. An audience which filled the auditorium to capacity heard Dr. Philip say that "there is not today a solution of any of our troublesome world problems if we take them separately. We have to recognize that there is but one great problem, which is really the creation of a new economic and political world organization."

Dr. Schultze declared that he is convinced that "only total disarmament can save the world from war," and that "there should be equality for disarmament only and not for rearming."

Making American Tour.

Dr. Philip and Dr. Schultze, two of the most prominent religious leaders in continental Europe, are making a tour of the principal American cities under the auspices of the committee on interchange of preachers between Europe and the United States. They spoke at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church last night and will be the guests of honor at a dinner given by the Federation of Churches at the Hay-Adams House this evening.

"For fifteen years since the armistice, we have not been making any real progress toward permanent peace because we have only been looking at our own national interests," Dr. Philip said. "There is fear and lack of faith because the people in each country are watching what is happening in other countries. Disarmament, to be successful, has to be subjected to international control. Disarmament has to take into account the whole economic and industrial life of nations.

French Plan Step Forward.

"The last disarmament proposal made by France is a great step forward, an effort to get nearer to other nations. We have people in France who are looking only at our own national interests, and I am afraid, if the present negotiations do not meet with success, our present government will fall, a more conservative government will take its place, and everything we have been doing in the last six months will be lost."

"The reason why Germany has turned more and more militaristic and nationalistic," said Dr. Schultze, "is because the German nation has found that the nations of the world do not believe in the machinery of the League of Nations; that they do not believe in arbitration; that they do not believe in arms and armament; that they do not have confidence in each other to liberate the world from the terrible fear of the next war, which will mean the end of civilization. A real, general association of nations is the solution."

A fractured skull suffered Saturday when he slipped and fell on a stairway of his home proved fatal to Adam C. Witherite, 62 years old, of 1519 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Witherite slipped while ascending a cellar stairway and struck his head. He was taken to Casualty Hospital by the Fire Rescue Squad.
